JOY! IDOLS OF SCREEN RETURN!

"Movie" Patrons See Sunshine Again as Ban Is Removed; Feast Follows Famine

"He's back!"

Stout, middle-aged, comfortable, she settled into her seat. From the serene the stern and noble features of her hero radiated sunshine into her heart.

At last! The ban is off, mothers, grandmothers, maiden and married aunts! Off the movies, and on the washtub. This morning 999 family washes stood neglected in the suds or were sent to the laundry, while materfamilias went to see the "Hilium."

Feast after famine—cold waters to a thirsty soul—Paradise regained! A land of plenty, flowing with milk and honey, after pestilence and plague. To the eternal romantic heart of middle-age, the re-opening of Boston's movie houses was all these things.

"I wonder where he's been these past three weeks," meaning her pet star.

SICH DREARY WASTE.

This was the burden of comment. Joke about "real" drama and "reel" drama all you want—they are the same to Aunt Maggie, who adores William Farnum; to susceptible Cousin Sarah, who would think Rushman an Adonis if she had ever heard of Adonis; and to dear old Grandma, who never misses a Douglas Fairbanks picture.

To them, the time the movies have

OFFERS ANAESTHETIC TO WAR DEPARTMENT

New York, Oct. 21.—Gordon Edwards, an American chemist, whose anaesthetic spray has been officially adopted by the French and Italian governments for use in the base hospitals, is here today awaiting an interview with War Department officials, which he hopes will result in the adoption of the spray in the American hospitals. The spray, which is a solution of quinine and hydrochlorides, has been found to minimize the suffering of wounded and can be administered by stretcher bearers.

PAGE'S CONDITION IS GREATLY IMPROVED

New York, Oct. 21.—Walter Hines Page, former Ambassador to England, is now sitting up, and probably will be out in a few days, it was announced at St. Luke's Hospital.

Battle of the Mediterranean.

The little Gloucester, a scout boat, kept in touch, wiring constantly the German movements to the main squadron. Suddenly, the Goeben and Breslau let off all the vibrations their wireless could command, jamming the air with such a hullabaloo that the Gloucester was unable to send intelligible messages. Then the German cruisers turned south and made for the Aegean Sea.

The plucky little Gloucester kept close on their heels, and, as my daughter had related, had even once audaciously offered battle. A few hours behind the British squadron pursued, but uselessly, for the German ships, though far less powerful in battle, were much speedier. Even then the British admiral probably thought that he had spoiled the German plans. The German ships might get first to the Dardanelles, but at that point stood international law

BRIGHTON FIRE DRIVES 150 TO STREET

More than 150 persons were driven to the street scantily clad early today when a three-alarm fire which started in the basement of the Washington building, at the corner of Washington and Market streets, Brighton, partly consumed the building.

The fire burned through the floor to D. L. Rourke's drug store, then spread to Fay Lunch Room and Shepard's Creamery and up through the ceiling to the second and third floors. Occupants of the sixteen apartments of the building, aroused by John Alward, the janitor, fled to the street.

The fire was discovered by John Mack, who was sitting in a restaurant on Market street opposite the building, when he noticed smoke and flame coming from the cellar windows. He sounded an alarm from a box in front of the building.

Although the Chestnut Hill avenue engine house was less than 100 yards away, the smoke was coming from the basement in such volumes that the firemen were unable to locate the fire. Finally smoke pipes were inserted through the windows and the cellar was flooded in an attempt to drown the fire. Before it could be overcome, however, it ate its way through to the first floor.

The Hotel Imperial, which is situated directly back of the burned building, sent all its guests to the street when the fire had gained dangerous proportions and seemed as if it would sweep the block.

GENERAL STRIKE THREATENED TO AID MOONEY

New York, Oct. 21.—A general strike is to be called throughout the country unless Thomas J. Mooney, doomed to die for complicity in the San Francisco preparedness parade bomb explosion, is given a new trial or released immediately, according to a leaflet issued here by Mrs. Rena Mooney, the condemned man's wife.

The leaflet is being circulated from labor headquarters here and in other cities. Mrs. Mooney declares her circular will reach two million workers. She writes:

"Already telegrams are coming from various parts of the country that work is going to cease unless Mooney is given a new trial or released at once. We know that your organizations will not be found lacking in urging President Wilson to take this case off these farmers' hands. This is a labor war and will go down in history as the most damning conspiracy ever attempted against labor.

"Although a reprieve has been given Tom Mooney until after the election for Governor of California, still he can no longer write an appeal to you personally. As you know, he now sits in the death cell awaiting the hangman's noose, railroaded there by testimony whose perjured character is undenied and undeniable. When my dear husband was led away he said: 'Labor will find a remedy.'"

AMERICANS WIN FIERCE BATTLE

Despite Bad Weather Drive Enemy in Woods and Near Freya Positions

With the American First Army, Oct. 21.—Pushing northward amid a drizzling rain in all day fighting, we nibbled off the Bois de Rappes and Bois Clairbechene, west of Bantheville, while other American elements, through the fiercest fighting, progressed slightly northwest of Bantheville in the thick woods in that region, nearly reaching the next German line of defence, the strong "Freya" position.

It is reported a single American platoon cleaned up Clairbechene Wood, which has a triangular shape and whose position on a slope is especially difficult. The platoon emerged on the northern side.

Thus we have driven the Germans back everywhere along a three-mile front from the woods forming the outer defences of the "Freya Stellung." We must now cross in flat open plain for several hundred metres, swept by the enemy machine gunners.

On our left flank there was infantry fighting of the severest kind all day long in the Bois des Loges. The Germans counter-attacked repeatedly. We made no fresh progress but firmly held our positions.

A captured German army order shows the enemy units are instructed to hold here to the death. The order emphasizes the importance of preventing the Americans from breaking through on this front while the allies are advancing in the north

LT.-COL. SHANNON KILLED IN ACTION

Lieutenant-Colonel James A. Shannon, who commanded the Harvard R. O. T. C. last year, has been killed in action in France, according to dispatches from the front. He left Harvard to become a member of General Pershing's staff last year, and since that time has been on active duty. He was thirty-five years old and leaves a widow and three children.

Colonel Shannon was graduated from West Point in 1902.

TO ARREST LANDLORDS HOLDING BACK ON HEAT

New York, Oct. 21.—So many New York landlords have refused to heat their apartment houses before November 1 that the Board of Health, which is coping with the influenza epidemic, announced that arrests would be made beginning today in all such cases.

President Determined Germans Must Unconditionally Accept Terms Laid Down

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Oct. 21.—The national capital displayed scant interest today in the German note. The various cabled reports of what it might be expected to contain, the evident intent on the part of Berlin to shroud its whereabouts with mystery, gave no concern to officials.

At the Swiss legation on the charge d'affaires, Frederick O. Erelin, said early today that he entirely without word concerning it, and had not received it. The State Department had no advices. The entente diplomatic officials had cables indicating simply that the note was on the way here.

The fate of the document is certain. Administration sources again took occasion to explain that the President has not the slightest intention of allowing himself to be drawn into any negotiations.

SOCIETY GIRL AUTOIST KILLS TWO WORKMEN

New York, Oct. 21.—Miss Edith Mortimer, nineteen, society girl and daughter of Stanley Mortimer, a sealing clubman, will be arraigned Wednesday on a charge of running down a group of workmen, killing two and injuring two others. She was released on $15,000 bail. It was said at the hearing that Miss Mortimer, on a former accident, ran down and killed a five-year-old boy.

CHICAGO LOAN DISTRICT OVER BY $56,000,000

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Chicago, according to latest compiled unofficial estimates, exceeded its $252,000,000 Liberty Loan quota by $56,000,000, while the Seventh Federal Reserve District, of which Chicago is the centre, totaled its $870,000,000 quota by more than $56,000,000.

British Have Taken 6,209 Prisoners in Flanders

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 21.—The British captured 6,209 prisoners and 140 guns in the Flanders drive, the War Office announces.

The British have advanced about seven miles east of Roubaix and have reached the outskirts of Peca, only five miles north of Valenciennes.

Aeltre, Adegehem, Bellem, Ursel and Kanyneiaere in Belgium were occupied by the Belgians.

GIBBONS IS HONORED BY SIX NATIONS IN DAY

Baltimore, Oct. 21.—Half a dozen different countries yesterday bestowed high honors on Cardinal Gibbons on the occasion of the prelate's golden jubilee at St. Mary's Seminary.

"I am too old to have my head turned," said Cardinal Gibbons in an address of thanks, but I cannot refrain from saying that I am overwhelmed by the great honors that are coming to me from all parts of the world, from the government of Belgium, from France, from England, from Ireland, from Canada, and from Mexico."

The latest honor to arrive was notification that he had been made grand officer of the Legion of Honor of France.

OPPOSED THE LOAN, HOUSE IS NOW YELLOW

Binghamton, N. Y., Oct. 21.—The shoe store and the residence of George M. Ricks, a merchant, are both painted a bright yellow today as a result, it is said, of his having failed to purchase Liberty bonds. Ricks, who declared the war had ruined his business, later decided to buy two bonds. He is a native of Germany. A reward of $100 has been offered for the return to the Liberty Loan Committee of a list of persons here who did not buy bonds.

ENEMY QUITTING ANTWERP, REPORT

London, Oct. 21.—Heavy cannonading can be heard on the Dutch frontier from the region of Eecloo, said a dispatch from Sluis today. American and Colonial troops and heavy artillery have been concentrated there, the dispatch added. King Albert has arrived in Bruges.

London, Oct. 21.—Late dispatches from the Belgian-Holland border indicate that the Germans are preparing to quit the whole of Belgium. Antwerp, to the northern extremity of the line running through Namur to Metz, is being evacuated by the enemy, who are hastily stripping warehouses and factories of supplies and machinery which is being shipped into the interior of Germany.

Thirty-five submarines have been broken apart and are being transported overland to Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, while most of the airplanes, which were operating in Belgium, are being concentrated at Dusseldorff in Rhenish Prussia.

The famous poison gas factory at Solvay has been blown up as well as vast quantities of ammunition which the Germans have been unable to remove in their flight from the provinces of Flanders.

GERMANS EVACUATING ANTWERP; DISPATCHES FROM BORDER SAY

GHENT NOW OBJECTIVE OF ALLIES

Large Bodies of Enemy Troops Cut Off by Rapid Advance of Haig's Armies

Large bodies of the retreating enemy have been cut off by the rapid advance of the Allied cavalry which has reached the suburbs of Ghent. Fifteen thousand, in attempt to escape the French and Belgians crossed the border into Holland and have been interned, Amsterdam correspondents report.

ALLIES DOMINATE CANAL.

The Ghent-Bruges Canal, an important waterway which the Germans depended on for removal of supplies is now dominated by French and Belgian soldiers, whose line stretches from the borders of Holland south to Virdte, northeast of Courtrai, where they are in contact with the British.

The latter driving east from Lille through Cherete, are but two miles from the rail base of Tournai, the fall of which is momentarily expected. More than 7,000 prisoners were captured by Haig's men in their drive, which is still going on.

The Havre War office announces the crossing of the Lys. Meerlebeke-Maldeghem-Tirvel-Aelter, and here the Belgians have reached the Dutch frontier in the north, and southward have advanced further, and are half miles east of Bruges. Eeclloo, on the Bruges-Ghent Railway, is near this.

A number of armored trains, some guns and great quantities of war material were captured.

ADVANCE ON GHENT.

The concentric advance on Ghent continues in full swing. The Allies are plunging more than ten miles in three directions, northwest, west and southwest.

Meerlerke lies five miles northeast of Bruges. Maldeghem is nine miles due east of Bruges. Tirvel lies ten miles northeast of Ghent and Aelter, a town of considerable size, lies twelve miles due east of Ghent.

THREATEN VALENCIENNES.

The British launched a new smash on the Selle River above Le Cateau and advanced more than a mile on the east bank on a ten-mile front.

Here, as well as from Denain, the advance threatens Valenciennes, the largest German base in the northern area besides Ghent. Last front dispatches show the British, despite desperate resistance, have five miles west of Valenciennes.

Below Le Cateau American troops are progressing steadily side by side with the British, throwing back the German gap line east of the Sambre-Oise Canal.

To the south of this front the French made new important progress toward Marle, another vital rail base. Both Guise and Rihemont are reported to be in Allied hands.

BERLIN ADMITS LOSS.

North of the upper course of the Aisne, the French under Gouraud are pressing irresistibly forward, Berlin admitting the loss of the heights near Vouziers.

Troops of Pershing's American First Army advanced on a three-mile front, taking powerfully-defended woods and virtually reaching the Freya position, the Germans' last line of resistance between the Meuse and the Argonne.

Unofficial front dispatches state that General Mangin's army has broken through the whole Wagnerian defence system and has advanced five kilometres (a little more than three miles) in the direction of Marle (an important railway point on the Aisne), northeast of Laon.

WILL ASK WILSON TO RECOGNIZE POLISH NATION

New York, Oct. 21.—Following a luncheon given Mr. and Mrs. Ignace Paderewski, a committee was appointed to draft a petition asking President Wilson to recognize the Polish nation and permit the creation of a Polish regiment to be sent to the eastern front. In a fervent appeal for aid to the Poles, Paderewski declared that should Germany be permitted to hold and Teutonize large slices of Polish and Russian territory she would soon be able to start another world war.

TYPES OF FAMOUS ALPINI FIGHTERS WHO MADE THE GERMANS RUN

These noted soldiers of the Italian army acted as the Liberty loan were in Boston. They are now on the way back to help put the finishing touches to the Kaiser's crack guards. Left to right they are: Guiseppe Donichetti; Francesco Gelliardi, and Sergeant Fran cesco Marieni.

JOY FOR 'MOVIE' FANS AS IDOLS SMILE AGAIN

been ruined has been a desert, one of life's waste places. And of course, their idol has been dead, too, during that time. Aunt Maggie Maggie can't conceive of her beloved William except on the screen. Cousin Sarah would die if it occurred to her that Mr. Beverly Bayne was continuing to make love during the ban. And dear old Grandma fancies that her own "Bobs" has been getting a well-earned rest.

"Looks better than ever," she thought when she saw his lively jaws scampering up and down telegraph poles once more.—"Like old times."

Cousin Sarah feels as though her hair had grown grayer in the interval, but is glad to note that the Dutchman locks are debonair as ever.

LIVE AGAIN IN ROMANCE.

But not all the comment was on the screen. For romantic elderly hearts are often flattered by the beauties of the screen as well as to its knights. Perhaps those hearts recall their own brave days of romance, perhaps in the Pickford curls, the Hara Eyes, the Anna Steward smile, how that received charms of their own. They thrill with the heroine in love or palpitate with her in danger. And when the lover appears on the scene—

"Don't you just love the way he smiled in when he heard that shot?" exclaimed a buxom matron who turned out for the first show.

Most of the middle-aged "fans" are buxom. Somehow, the stouter they are, the harder they "fall."

"Yes, but I liked when he found her in the garden better," replied her companion, a kindred soul. "He certainly does make love just ideal!"

"I dunno. I think he was too wistful. I like 'em more masterful, like Bill Hart. Now, he ain't handsome, but nice—well, he's masterful."

The woman in the row behind has come alone, but under her capacious sunrwaiat a silent monologue is going on.

JUST LIKE GEORGE.

"His eyes remind me of George's. I wonder what's become of George. I hope Nora Wash. Boil the colored cottoned. He said he would write as soon as he got an address. None of my letters came back—he must a got 'em. Well, I certainly waited long enough—I s'pose he's married now. If Henry knew— Christ! I love better lookin' than Marion here—he's got a beautiful head of hair, and his hand, even if he ain't as handsome as George was.

"Nerad oughter have the towels out on the line by this time, but she's so slow, I dunno. I'll just wait till this is over and then go home. Wonder when the bill changes. I could go to the theatre on the avenue tonight and come in town again tomorrer."

For the next week or so is going to be an orgy. Cousin Sarah is going to a show every day. Grandma is reading the newspapers again, to find what the new bills are. (She never reads the war news, for little Johnny tells her all about the war. But she won't take movie news from anybody—she wants it all first hand.)

AUNTIE ALL DOLLED UP.

Aunt Maggie had fixed herself for—for—for believe me, Aunt Maggie "dolls up" when she goes to the movies. It's an old joke, about "Dearie" primking at her mirror before she answers "Hon's telephone call, but "Dearie" has nothing on Aunt Maggie. Aunt Maggie would as soon think of going out of doors in her nightie as of going to see William Farnum in her last year's suit.

So look for her tonight—she will be gorgeous. And even Grandma, who has no illusions about her own departed beauty, but still loves to look upon a gallant figure of a man—even dear old grandma will wear her new with satin and real kid gloves.

WOMAN IS KILLED AS AUTO CAPSIZES

As the result of an automobile accident in Concord Mrs. William E. Green of Westford is dead and her son, William Kenneth Green, is in the hospital.

The accident happened on Bedford street, at the foot of Sleepy Hollow Hill, just outside Concord Centre. A flat tire caused the machine to swerve across the left of the highway and leave the roadway. Before Mr. Green could stop the machine, it crashed through a fence and tore down a twenty-foot embankment, landing bottom side up in a brook. He was slightly injured.

YANKEES WITH BRITISH DOWN 100 PLANES

Son of Judge Landis of Chicago, "Ace" of "Aces," Among Fliers

By HENRY G. WALES.
International News Service Staff Correspondents.

With the First American Army, Oct. 4 (By Mail).—American aviators flying with the British air forces have destroyed nearly a hundred German machines.

The American ace of aces with the British is Lieutenant R. G. Landis, son of Judge K. M. Landis of Chicago. He is officially credited with destroying nine German airplanes and one enemy captive balloon, a total of ten victories. Lieutenant Landis is a member of the Royal Air Force, having joined up with the British before the United States entered the war.

Following are the names and records of Americans who are serving in the R. A. F., which is the combined Royal Naval Air Service and Royal Flying Corps: Lieutenant P. E. Luff, five; J. O. Donaldson, four; H. L. Blair, three; I. P. Corse, two; G. A. Vaughn, two; D. S. Polor, two, including a balloon; and the following each have one victory to their credit: E. H. Barksdale, J. G. Bowdoin, A. P. Diamond, R. D. Oracle, T. J. Herbert, W. W. Lauer, A. P. Mathews, D. A. Ralston, H. D. Stier, S. Schlestchauer.

Besides these aviators, there are a number of Americans in the American aviation service who have been attached to various British squadrons for active intensive training. Two of these pilots have developed into aces, being officially credited with five enemy machines destroyed, and a number of them are scored with air victories.

The list is as follows: Lieutenants H. R. Clay, five; L. A. Hamilton, five, including two balloons; M. L. Campbell, three; J. O. Creech, three; G. V. Seibold, three; E. W. Springs, three; C. Bissell, two; F. A. Dixon, two; P. E. Kludley, two; T. L. Moore, two; H. M. Todd, two balloons and the following each are credited with an official air victory; W. J. Armstrong, J. F. Campbell, H. C. Knotts, W. R. Knox, C. I. McLean, W. D. Tipton, G. D. Wicks, R. D. Williams and T. T. Wyly.

EMANCIPATION OF CZECHO-SLOVAKS RIGHTS WRONGS AGES OLD

BLOOD TIES BIND ALL PEOPLES OF LAND

Czechs, Once a Power in Europe, Under Iron Heel of Austria Since 16th Century

The new Czecho-Slovak State, whose independence is declared by a Provisional Government and the Czecho-Slovak National Council, sets up a new nation of more than ten million liberty-loving persons.

The new State will form itself in Northern Austria and Hungary. It will embrace all of Bohemia (the home land of the Czechs), Moravia and Silesia. It will also reunite the Bohemians with their Slovak brothers in Slovakia, which has been under Magyarian domination for the past half-century.

Who are the Czechs and Slovaks? They are defined thus:

"CZECHS—The members of the most westerly branches of the great Slavic family of races, including the Bohemians, the Czechs proper, Moravians and Slovaks.

"SLOVAKS—A Slavic race dwelling chiefly in northern Hungary and the adjoining part of Moravia."

AREAS AND POPULATIONS.

The areas and populations of the three chief constituent parts of the new State are:

	Square Miles	Population (Est. 1912)
Bohemia	20,065	6,327,261
Moravia	8,584	2,567,304
Silesia	1,988	769,674
Totals	30,637	10,248,239

Prague, the capital of Bohemia, has been mastered by the Czecho-Slovaks, according to information from Sweden, via Berlin. Prague is the third largest city in Austria. With its suburbs it numbered in peace times a population of between 550,000 and 600,000. It is located on both sides of the Moldau River, is an important railroad center and has extensive commerce and manufactures.

Among its principal buildings are the historic old Cathedral, the Hradschin Castle, Imperial Palace and its celebrated University, founded in 1845.

Bohemia lies at the extreme northwest part of Austria. It is bounded on the north by Saxony and Silesia and on the west by Bavaria. Although the Bohemians as a race they have been ruled for five centuries by Austria, with German as the official language.

RECOGNIZED BY WILSON.

The status of the new nation is made all the more firm by President Wilson's reply to the Austrian peace note. In this reply the President said that the Austro-Hungarian government must satisfy the national aspirations of its peoples, and that the people should be judges of their own destinies and rights. He called attention to the recognition by the United States of the Czecho-Slovak National Council as a de facto belligerent government.

Last August England formally recognized the Czecho-Slovak National Council. The United States followed suit in September, recognizing them "as de facto belligerents governed by a council clothed with authority to direct the military and political affairs of the Czecho-Slovak peoples."

The Czecho-Slovak army consists at about 150,000 men. They hold 2,000 miles of the Siberian railroad.

INDEPENDENCE DECLARED.

Independence of the Czech-Slovak nation was formally declared last Friday. After a decree to the effect that the Hapsburg dynasty was formally renounced, the essential features of the principles enunciated in the declaration are contained in the following excerpt:

"We accept and shall adhere to the ideals of modern democracy, as they have been the ideals of our nation for centuries. The Czecho-Slovak State shall be a republic. In consequent endeavor for peace it will guarantee complete freedom of conscience, religion and science, literature and art, speech, the press and the right of assembly and petition.

"The democracy shall rest on universal suffrage; women shall be placed on an equal footing with men, politically, socially and naturally. The rights of the minority shall be safeguarded by proportional representation; national minorities shall be equal rights. The government shall be parliamentary in form and shall recognize the principles of initiative and referendum."

The declaration concluded with this heroic and democratic assertion:

"We believe in democracy— we believe in liberty—and liberty evermore."

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, A EUROPEAN NATION IN THE MAKING

Almost since their history began, the states of Bohemia and Moravia and the Slovak district of the Kingdom of Hungary have been more or less closely associated with the great powers that be in Central Europe. In the eighth and ninth centuries the Bohemians and their Moravian brothers, partially Christianized at the time, rendered valuable aid to Charlemagne, founder of the mediaeval German (Holy Roman) empire, in his wars against the pagan Avars, then inhabiting lands north of the Danube. About two centuries later, soon after the coming of the Magyars, Moravia became incorporated in Bohemia and has since remained politically part of the Czech nation. Bohemia was a great power in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries under the vigorous monarchs, Wenceslaus I. and his son, Premysl Ottokar II., the boundaries of the country being extended by the latter from the Baltic to the Adriatic. The independence of the Bohemian nation was lost in 1526, when the Austrian Archduke Ferdinand, chosen king, insisted upon the office being made hereditary instead of elective, as formerly. Since then the land has been entirely dominated by the Austrian archdukes and their imperial successors. The inhabitants of Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia are closely united in blood and speak virtually the same tongue, the dialects of Moravia and Slovakia differing less from Czech, the literary language, than the various native patois of the south of France do from the French of Paris.

NEW LUT FISK FOR SWEDES OF WORCESTER

Their Favorite Christmas Dish Comes From Japan This Year

Worcester, Oct. 21.—Swedish citizens of Worcester will have lut fisk, their favorite Christmas dish this year, but it will be Japanese lut fisk and not the Swedish brand.

William Blackstrom has received a shipment from Japan and says it is fully as good as the kind formerly shipped from Sweden and Norway.

The annual play of the Norwegian Lutheran Church will be conducted in November by the Young People's Society of the church. Among those in the cast are: Miss Jennie Larson, Miss Mabel Anderson, John Halfvorsen, Melvin Mills, Gertrude Fleidstad, Mrs. Melvin Mills, and Miss Mabel Johnson.

Eric Ericsson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Ericsson of No. 38 Beaconsfield road, left today for Boston Tech to take a course in naval aviation.

The male chorus of the Salem square Swedish Congregational Church will resume rehearsals tomorrow night at Alfred Pearson's piano warerooms, No. 270 Main street. Plans for the annual Fall concert will be discussed.

The Finnish Temperance Society will meet on October 27 at 7 p. m. at No. 67½ Laurel street.

Funeral services for Mrs. Gustaf Linderberg were held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from her home, No. 45 Huntington avenue.

WORCESTER FOX CLUB HOLDS ANNUAL HUNT

Worcester, Oct. 21.—The Worcester Fox Club will stage its annual hunt on the historic North grounds on Thursday, November 7. Presence of influenza in Barre caused the change in plans.

20,000,000 Home Cards to Be Distributed to Housewives

Washington, Oct. 21.—Twenty million home cards, containing the United States Food Administration's new food conservation regulations and suggestion, are to be distributed among American housewives, it was announced by the Food Administration.

It has been planned to distribute them on October 27, but because of the influenza epidemic this has been changed to December 1.

NEW FOOD RULES TAKE EFFECT TODAY

Boston, and the remainder of the country, adopted its new rationing system today upon the order of Food Administrator Herbert C. Hoover.

No longer may the hungry ones order more than one kind of meat. Neither may they be served bread which contains less than 20 per cent. wheat substitute.

Bread or toast as a garniture under meat is forbidden. If a diner expects a roll or bread to be placed upon the table before his meal is served, he will be disappointed, for that, too, is under the ban.

Bacon as a garniture is no longer permitted to be served, and more than one-half ounce of butter at any one meal is strictly tabooed.

American cheese, once a common commodity, can no longer be obtained in quantity of more than one-half ounce to each person. The sugar bowl, as heretofore, is barred, and the diner must ask for sugar if that sweet be served to him. Cream de luxe is to be but a memory.

Public eating places are forbidden to burn food or to display food for such time as would make it valueless for human consumption.

Side dishes are no longer permissible. Meat and vegetables will be served upon one plate and silverware absolutely necessary will be used.

Elaborate menus will be done away with, for the purpose of saving food, labor and printing.

WOMEN TO RUN CRANES AT WATERTOWN ARSENAL

Women are to be used as operators on the cranes at the Watertown arsenal and thus relieve men for other kinds of work. This is the first time in the history of the arsenal that women have been employed for mechanical work.

Today saw the opening of a school at the arsenal where the women will be taught to do this kind of work. The school is but a beginning and will be followed by a larger school on November 1, when 300 women will be employed as machine operators.

The women will be instructed by A. L. Lewis, an ordnance instructor from Washington.

TELLS OFFICERS HOW TO WIN PROMOTION

Prof. Pope Explains New War Department Plan for Giving Army Ratings

Professor Arthur Upham Pope of California University and now of Washington, gave the commissioned officers of the Northeastern Department, No. 99 Chauncy street, the particulars of the new rating scale to be adopted in the future promotion of army officers.

All the officers of the department, gathered under the leadership of Major-General William Crozier, commanding officer, were told of the interest which led Professor Pope to give up his chair of psychology in the University of California and offer his services during the war to the Government.

The professor applied a psychological test to the usefulness of officers, using the same test that is often applied to determine the efficiency of men in business.

"There are five tests to be made of men," explained the professor.

MUST MOBILIZE FORCES.

"The physical qualities, intelligence, leadership, personal qualities and general value to the service.

"We have not yet mobilized our human forces in the army. We must learn to put a man where he is most fit. There are thirty-seven kinds of engineers, thirty-four kinds of mechanics and eight or more different kinds of artisans. These men must be rightly placed, and until they are rightly placed we fall short of military power.

"A short time ago, in the Quartermaster's Department, it was impossible to open a safe. So provided that the quartermaster became that he always must throw the key of the safe into the water. Finally some one discovered that there was a former safe-breaker in the company. He was correctly placed at the safe and with a little twist opened it.

"The man proved his efficiency in one direction. When we are speaking of the physical qualities of a man, we do not mean that he has passed the doctor, or has no murmur in his heart.

"But how does this officer impress the men, who has neatness, voice energy and endurance? If a man is shabby or poor, he should not be thrust aside. We are to discover his good points and place him where those good points will be put into service."

QUICK ACTION SOUGHT.

"In the matter of intelligence, we look for the man who can use what brains he has, who can take hold of resources quickly and help to solve them, who has not to be told three or four times of conditions.

"In leadership, we look for the officer who has natural prestige, self-reliance and ability to inspire men, in opposition to the man who has cowardice, selfishness and a big head."

AUSTRIA'S NOTE DENOUNCED BY PENFIELD

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 21.—President Wilson's reply to the Austrian plea for an armistice is strongly endorsed by Frederic Courtland Penfield, former ambassador to Austria-Hungary.

The autonomy proposition of Emperor Karl, according to Mr. Penfield, was a mere subterfuge and would be of but little benefit to the subject states of the Empire, because they would remain under the sovereignty of the emperor, without representation in the imperial parliament.

"What effect President Wilson's refusal to discuss an armistice with Emperor Karl will have in Austria I cannot say," said Mr. Penfield, "but I can easily picture the consternation in the Czech cities of Prague and Brunn and throughout the Trieste district and Dalmatia. All of which is pro-Italian in sympathy, language and blood.

"When the news dispatches tell us that Hungary is on the point of declaring its independence, I am at loss to understand what is meant, for the land of the Magyars is already in the fullest sense an independent and sovereign state. Whether its independence means changing from a kingdom to a republic, I know not.

"I know, however, that the Hungarians in their hearts despise Germany. Probably two-thirds of the people in Hungary approve America's course in the war and know that the Central Powers are rapidly being hemmed into the proverbial cocked hat.

"There are in the United States some 1,750,000 Hungarians, and in normal times they send home to relatives and friends as much as $150,000,000 a year. Their influence is potent."

RED CROSS URGES ALL NURSES TO REGISTER

Registration of nurses by the Red Cross, Boston Metropolitan Chapter, was expected to be begun today or tomorrow for the purpose of securing complete data on graduate women who are qualified to do nursing. The registration is made at the request of the surgeon-general of the U. S. A. The registrants include all women who have had some nursing experience. The registration is not confined to graduate nurses. Graduates of first grade courses, undergraduates of junior grade nurses and semi-trained nurses will be registered.

Mrs. William F. Murray, widow of the late Postmaster Murray of Hopkinton, is recovering at Charlesgate Hospital today following a Caesarian operation in connection with the birth of a baby girl. Attending physicians report both mother and baby are doing well.

GERMANY MUST YIELD ON ALL POINTS

President, It Is Said, Will Waste No More Words in Parleying With Berlin

has been set forth in his decision. That decision has the indorsement of the allies. Nothing but complete compliance with the conditions as set forth will permit any additional steps by the United States.

THE SUBMARINE ISSUE.

Whether there will be any reply at all to a new German note that begs the question of a request that only the President could decide. Most officials and the entire inner diplomatic representation here was hopeful that the President would simply reply as he did to the Austrian note. But no one was prepared to be able to speak for the President.

If Germany believes that by ordering her submarines to return to their bases she will solve the submarine question she is wrong. The United States into the present war, she is likely to be very much mistaken. The submarine question will not be settled, officials said, until guarantees are furnished that these weapons of warfare shall no longer be used in violation of international law.

Incidentally, officials called attention to the fact that last week, while the German submarine bases in Ostend and Zeebrugge were in operation, the German fone was all against modifying submarine activities since then the allies have taken control of the Belgian coast. Now the Uboat submarines can operate only through the very dangerous North Sea or via the Skagerrack, equally hazardous, and the Germans are willing to recall their underwater assassins.

A WASTE OF TIME.

Incidentally a defence of her methods and a justification of the murder by torpedo and submarine shell five of women and children, such as some advices indicate Germany intends, is certain to arouse the most bitter resentment here against the present German government. The same feeling will follow any declaration by Germany protesting against interference with her internal affairs.

On the face it did not appear today that there was the slightest chance that Germany would succeed in her new note that will gain her anything at all. The President clearly has the backing of the Hapsburgs by referring the Austrian situation to the Czecho-Slovaks and Jugo-Slavs. His next move is expected to be to make it plain to the Austrians that it simply will be time with notes while refusing to accept the only terms on which peace is possible.

PUSHING GERMANS OUT.

It was the military situation that was to the front here today. The Germans are being rapidly pushed out of Belgium and the occupied sections of France. And, as the lines are shortened, it becomes more and more difficult for the allied aviators to bombard German territory. This is the first factor to bring the Huns to terms officials say, and once the German cities such as Cologne and Treves are also bombardment from the air, unconditional surrender by Germany will be the only logical opinion of the military experts.

Amsterdam Hears Reply Was Handed Swiss Envoy Last Saturday Night

Amsterdam, Oct. 21—Berlin advices reaching here, which, however, are unofficial, state that Germany's reply to President Wilson was handed to the Swiss Minister Saturday night.

Its contents are summed up as follows:

Germany makes a "provisional offer" to cease unrestricted submarine warfare.

She offers to evacuate Belgium, but asks the President to mediate in Germany's internal affairs.

She denies the responsibility for the loss of women and children in sinkings by submarines.

She declares President Wilson's charges regarding cruelties and wanton destruction in Northern France and Belgium false.

The report may have been sent out merely as a "feeler," such as the German press has been known in the past to indulge in.

It must be a correct outline of the German reply, and it may be entirely different from the official text sent to Washington, if such a note has been sent.

Some dispatches say it is uncertain whether the note has been dispatched at all, adding that the note may not be sent before Monday. Other advices hint that the reply was practically dictated by General von Hindenburg, for the army, and Admiral von Scheer for the navy.

The Berlin press says the Kaiser visited the Chancellor recently at Potsdam Saturday, and that the reply was drafted at Potsdam as he was guarded by police and troops, for fear of demonstrations and possible assassination attempts.

The latest patented device which, in one picture frame, enables any war charity to move his loyalty

I am German but I am with Uncle Sam and against the Kaiser, said Robert Schmidt of No. 452 Huntington avenue who offers the latest novelty of a picture frame for the display of war charity organizations as proof of his statement.

My patriotism is pending over Mr. Schmidt. "And I am willing to give it to the full extent of any other American citizen. I have no connection with the manufacturers of these frames. I believe they will be very popular. They are made in the shape of an airship as nearly as anyone can describe it. Each has room for a photograph of a soldier, sailor or member of any war organization.

"I gather from the words 'My Boy' over these the photographs of most anyone can be placed in the sweetheart, mother or daughter. If the man or boy died for their country the picture can be framed with the photograph and have black edging and if the man or boy live it can be of gold.

EVERETT ACE IS BELIEVED TO BE PRISONER

Lieut. Wehner, With Five Victories to His Credit, Missing Since Sept. 18

Lieutenant Joseph F. Wehner, American ace and former captain of the Everett High School and Everett Academy football teams, is believed a prisoner of the Germans, according to a letter received by his mother, Mrs. Frank W. Wehner, from the commanding officer of Lieutenant Alfred A. Ignat, 27th Aero squadron.

The letter from Lieutenant Ignat followed an official message from Washington stating that young Wehner was missing in action.

Wehner became separated from his partner, Flight Duke Kr. of Phoenix, Ariz., in a flight over the enemy lines on September 18 and failed to return to the airdrome. Lieutenant Ignat, that his engine broke and he was forced to land within the German lines. He was taken prisoner.

From the date of his first victory on September 12, writes Lieutenant Ignat, "one brought down two enemy planes and four balloons. He has also made him more than an ace, and not only on paper does he record his victories, but is on the front and fought with him know that he was above the average pilot.

"I had had a long talk with him the day before he was missed. He was sent out to work out new flying tactics and formations. On the 18th he and Luke arranged for a trip over the German lines. Everything was located previously and they were to start at 4 p. m. that they went over. Luke on this occasion did the work and Wehner was to follow and protect. They got two balloons and then became separated.

"Luke returned home, but we have not seen Joe. I have exhausted all channels through which I thought he might be. I have failed. The balloons dropped from motors altitude and Wehner's whereabouts is unknown to the lines. You will believe me, when I say that I have not yet believed he was killed. I think his engine broke and he was forced to land and be taken prisoner. Joe was a fine boy and a fine flyer."

Besides his official victories he brought down three other balloons and two enemy planes which were not confirmed. The day before he went over he had brought down a plane and another enemy craft for him. Of course, he did not know this, and could not claim them as victories.

"I am sorry to say that Lieutenant Luke, too, is missing since the 18th. No doubt both of them are prisoners now," Capt. Shanks, the adjutant of the squadron, wrote.

SAYS SOCIALISTS OF FRANCE ARE WITH WILSON

Deputy Marcel Cachin Declares Internal Revolution Has Already Started in Germany

By NABOTH HEDIN.

Paris, Oct. 21.—The support of President Wilson's position in the present crisis of the peace negotiations is declared by Marcel Cachin, Socialist deputy and member of the Socialist Parliamentary Committee, to be unanimous among the Socialists of France. Cachin, who is regarded as a spokesman for the Socialist party, made the statement in an interview with me.

"We feel President Wilson is upheld from imperialistic and capitalistic points of view, though he is not a socialist. We respect him as

ADMIRE WILSON'S METHODS.

"In France the democrats have been the most sincere admirers from the start of President Wilson's policies and methods and our working classes so steadfast.

Henry M. Cachin referred to the French translation of Mr. Wilson's speeches, which he stated made a matter of historical morality, adding that President Wilson already has become one of the great figures in the French socialistic drama a combination of the peace conversations.

"Beyond doubt," replied the deputy to a question, "the German people are sufficiently anxious for peace to force their government to reply to President Wilson's note. Personalities are negligible now.

"It does not matter whether the Kaiser leaves the throne himself, or has it taken from him. The only question is whether the German people will be able to overthrow the entire system of government which has led them to the present situation.

"I am convinced that the war crisis were related by Sergeant C. J. Spalding, American soldier, who has been three years in the German trenches, and who was for eight months a prisoner of war in German East Africa.

MORE THAN 1,000 WAR RELICS ON DISPLAY

More than 1,000 articles brought to Boston from the battlefields of Belgium and France were on display today at the exposition of battle relics in the Boston Commercial Club, Washington street.

Prominent among the articles is the original decree condemning the English Red Cross nurse, Edith Cavell, to death by the German military authorities. Other proclamations of the original, written in French and posted in Belgium, are on display.

Also gathered connected with the war relics were related by Sergeant C. J. Spalding, American soldier, who has been three years in the German trenches, and who was for eight months a prisoner of war in German East Africa.

LODGER HANGS SELF TO ESCAPE DRAFT

John Bolinsky, a lodger at No. 11A Stanford street, committed suicide by hanging rather than face the task, presumably, of making out his draft questionnaire.

Patrolmen who forced in the door of his room, at the request of the landlady, found him hanging by a necse attached to a door. On a table were pen and ink and the questionnaire on which he had written part of the answer to the first question. The body was removed to the North Grove street mortuary. He was thirty-five years old and single.

CAMBRIDGE BOY STRUCK BY STRAY RIFLE SHOT

Raymond Le Cuyer, eleven, of No. 18 Montgomery street, North Cambridge, is resting comfortably at the Cambridge Hospital, where he was taken after being struck by a stray bullet from a 22-calibre rifle while walking in the meadows near Russell's field, North Cambridge. Patrick Indore, fourteen, of No. 25 Jackson street, Raymond's companion, says he did not see anyone in the field or meadow.

LIEUT. WEBBER IS KILLED IN CAMP

Lieutenant William Wallace Webber, attached to Co. K of the 181th Battalion at Fort Lee, N. J., died of injuries received in a gas explosion in camp. Another officer was killed instantly and five others injured. Lieutenant Webber was a gas instructor at the camp. He lived at No. 11 Wallingford road, Brighton, and was the son of Mrs. Ellen Webber.

Boston Draftees Leave

Two hundred and forty-four Boston draftees were scheduled to leave for training camps today. These men are the first of 2,353 draftees called for service at Portland, New Bedford and Boston Harbor forts.

CREAM APPLIED IN NOSTRILS MAY PREVENT SPANISH INFLUENZA

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night! Your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly. It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.—Advertisement.

CHICAGO GIRL ACE IN PEACE DIVISION

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Seven-year-old Mary Katherine Mack has become a sort of "ace" in the gas defence division of Uncle Sam's chemical warfare service. She has collected 12,000 peach stones which, turned into charcoal, will make real life savers out of sixty gas masks. Mary received her reward in the form of a most official citation by Lieutenant William Jackson, head of the gas defence division.

Rupture Kills 7,000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." What becomes the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affection and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, a truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every time sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is positively the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD, when adhering closely to the body, cannot possibly slip sideways out of place, therefore no chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used while you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as Nature intended so that rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., Block 972, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the information necessary.

3,000 Alien Soldiers Take Oath of Allegiance

Camp Devens, Ayer, Oct. 21.—Three thousand soldiers of different nationalities who before being drafted for service in the United States were not citizens, were today lined up on the drill ground, and after pledging allegiance to the country and promising to lay down their lives if necessary on the field of battle, were naturalized by officers of the United States Court.

The ceremony was an impressive one. A regimental band played patriotic airs and when the "Star Spangled Banner" was rendered, all joined in the chorus.

Rheumatism Relief--25c.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets), Are Helping Thousands Who Tried Expensive Things Without Result. It's Guaranteed.

There are three vital processes of human existence—the digestion of food, the extraction of nourishment from it and the elimination of waste. Poor digestion and assimilation means failure to derive full nourishment from food and that in turn often means impoverished blood, weakness, anemia, etc. Poor elimination means an accumulation of waste matter which poisons the body, lowers vitality, decreases the power of resistance to disease and leads to the development of many serious ills.

Rheumatism—due to some interference with the process of elimination, failure to get rid of certain body poisons—cannot be expected to yield to any medicine that fails to correct the conditions responsible for it. Could any reasonable person expect to rid himself of rheumatic pain as long as rheumatic poison is allowed to remain in the body?

Think of this. It explains the success of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) in so many cases where other medicines have failed. Thousands are using NR Tablets every day and getting relief. Why pay five or ten times as much for uncertain things? A 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets), containing enough to last twenty-five days—must help you, must give you prompt relief and satisfactory benefit or cost you nothing.

Nature's Remedy is not only for the relief of rheumatism. It improves digestion, tones the liver, regulates kidney and bowel action, improves the blood and cleanses the system. You're tired the expensive medicines and doctors, now make the real test. You'll get results this time. Just try it. Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold, guaranteed, and recommended by your druggist.

BLISS NATIVE HERB TABLETS

A RUN DOWN SYSTEM is like a run down clock. Unless tuned up it is of little use. If you are run-down from overwork, don't neglect your condition. Get a box of Bliss Native Herb Tablets, take one or two each night and you will note an immediate improvement. For over thirty years they have proved a wonderful remedy for men, women and children in maintaining health and vigor. Mrs. Christie F. Neville, Irvington, writes: "I was all run-down in health, and it seemed nothing would help me, but I was induced to try Bliss Native Herb Tablets. I am thankful for this wonderful remedy, because I am enjoying good health." Don't delay taking Bliss Native Herb Tablets. There is nothing to equal them for relieving the cause of constipation, liver and kidney trouble, sick headache, rheumatism, disordered stomach. They stimulate the liver, purify the blood and tone up the system, also improve the appetite. Get the genuine. Look for the trade mark and money back guarantee on every box. Price $1.00 per box of 200 tablets.

Sold by leading druggists and local agents everywhere.

DECLARES RHODE ISLAND NEEDS 'GOVERNMENT'

Too Much Politics Now, Says Archambault, Democratic Gubernatorial Candidate

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 21.—"Rhode Island Needs Government, Not Politics."

That is the campaign slogan of Alberic A. Archambault, the pleasing and dignified young man of thirty-one, who is the Democratic candidate for Governor. He furthermore says:

"The people of Rhode Island have had altogether too much of politics and have gone hungry for good government long enough. They have been fed up on a brand of politics that any decent politicel health board would condemn as tainted, and the Democratic party proposes a dose of honest government as the remedy."

Be that as it may, Governor Beeckman is not the right kind of a man to lead a crusade for better conditions of government, because he is essentially a so-called "good fellow" and not disposed to wreck the Republican machine, which is, and, for many years, has been in control of men and things at the State House. The first necessary step, in his opinion, is the election of the next Governor and members of the General Assembly who will drive the lobbyists and their masters out of the State House and give ear to the petitions of citizens of low as well as those of high degree.

NEED REAL GOVERNMENT.

"When I say that Rhode Island needs government of the people, I believe I should explain just what, in my opinion, constitutes the difference," Mr. Archambault said to me. And he proceeded to do it in this way:

"Rhode Island needs and real government would give State ownership of the street railways; politics is more concerned about what the Rhode Island Company wants.

"The people of this State should have and real government would give them reasonable gas rates instead of the highest of any city in New England; politics favors large profits for the Providence Gas Company and everything else that its board of directors may want.

"Honest government would give equal suffrage to all citizens; politics rights to retain the property qualification.

"Good government means a public utilities act and a public utilities commission that will protect the interests of the people; politics has given us a public utilities act and a public utilities commission that is the pet of the special interests.

"Rhode Island's needs and decent government would develop good roads; politics nurses the State Board of Public Roads, which has produced the worst road system in the country.

"Rhode Island needs a new and modern State constitution; politics fears such weapons of popular initiative and referendum, and for seventy years has prevented changes of any moment being made in the archaic document.

WOULD CURTAIL COMMISSIONS.

"Honest government would give the people economy; politics wants a continuance of waste and inefficiency.

"Honest government would mean a comparatively few efficient and conscientious officials; politics means many useless commissions.

"Government in order secured through regular and impartial enforcement of laws; Republican politics has construed it to mean merely an annual raid, sometime in August, on a few gambling houses.

"Government would give our soldiers and sailors a full vote; politics will keep them on the half vote.

"Government means the abolishment of the fee system in public offices; politics means that the sheriff of Providence County will continue to receive compensation larger than all of the justices of the Supreme Court put together.

"Government means fair and equal representation of the cities and towns in the Senate; politics means that 8 per cent. of the population of the State shall control all legislation.

"Government means representatives in the General Assembly who are agents of the people; politics means a General Assembly controlled by lobbyists and politicians, as it has been for years."

MAKES SURE OF FACTS.

This young man who is leading the Democratic party of Rhode Island has been out of Boston University Law School but ten years. He was elected to the Senate from West Warwick in 1913 and was the town solicitor of Warwick in 1915. He returned to the Senate in 1917 and again this year. He is not of the brilliant type of statesman, with high sounding words and phrases for every occasion, but is the sort of a man who thinks things out, gives their meaning prefers to rely upon sound conclusions rather than snap judgments and tries to make sure of his facts before going ahead.

Under normal conditions, Mr. Archambault concedes, the State is Republican, but he insists that the abnormal conditions do not exist at present entirely due to the war. The high street car fares and the exorbitant gas rates have set the people thinking and digging into their pocketbooks as never before.

ARMY AND NAVY AMERICAN

LIBERTY. BOSTON, MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1918. DEMOCRACY.

ENLARGEMENT OF DEVENS PLANNED

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, Oct. 21.—Enlargement of this cantonment by the addition of new streets and the erection of 375 new buildings and forty portable houses in the Depot Brigade are among the plans now in process of formation. The work will start as soon as Congress passes an appropriation. It is estimated that these improvements will give employment to at least 4,000 persons, mostly carpenters.

Already there are a number of changes made in the camp. All kinds of improvements are being introduced for the convenience of the soldiers. Especial attention is given to traffic regulations. Automatic semaphores have been installed in several sections to prevent accidents. At night these semaphores have illuminated signs which read "Stop" and "Go," and are of great assistance to autoists in warning them of approach to an intersecting street.

The new laundry building, near the main entrance, is almost complete. All that needs to be done there now is to install the necessary laundry machinery. It is understood that six civilians will be employed in the laundry, which will be run under the direction of the government. This is one of many improvements along that line.

A hat factory, where soldiers' hats will be manufactured, mended and blocked, is also included in the improvements. A shoe factory being erected is also talked of and may take form before the snow flies.

In all sections of the camp workmen are kept busy mowing down hills to the level of the street. Engineers and their assistants may be seen taking measurements and mapping out thoroughfares to connect with avenues leading north and south.

U. S. Fighting Plane Is Named for Worcester

Worcester, Oct. 21.—One of America's fighting airplanes was named "Worcester" at a big demonstration which attracted thousands of citizens to Worcester County fair grounds to celebrate the success of Worcester city and county oversubscribing their Liberty Loan quotas by $3,000,000.

Mrs. Homer Hage, chairman of the women's committee of the Fighting Fourth, broke a bottle of champagne across the propeller of the Liberty motor; the band played "Star Spangled Banner," and the first fighting plane to bear a name was christened in honor of the Heart of the Commonwealth.

After the ceremony the big plane, with Lieutenant James J. Gaines at the wheel and Captain Alfred Redfield in the second seat, thrilled the crowd with daring stunts in the air.

WOMEN ARMY NURSES DEMAND COMMISSIONS

Washington, Oct. 21.—Passage of the Lewis-Baker military rank for army nurses was declared today in order to be "absolutely essential if our wounded soldiers are to receive the care they should," by the national committee to secure rank for nurses.

The lack of such military rank is alleged to be seriously crippling the efficiency of nurses in military hospitals. The bill would grant relative rank, from second lieutenant to major to members of the army nurse corps, involving no increase in pay, no commission, but the right to wear officers' insignia and possess officers' authority in hospital and sanitary matters, under the direction of army doctors.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

Well Known Lady Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair By a Simple Home Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home-made remedy, made the following statement:

"Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy with this simple remedy, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. This is not a dye, it does not color the most delicate scalp; is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray haired person look 10 to 20 years younger."

PISO'S

RAISE $250,000 AT RADIO SCHOOL

Cambridge, Oct. 21.—Radio officials and enlisted personnel are jubilant over the showing made by the Radio School in the fourth Liberty Loan campaign. While definite figures have not as yet been announced, it is known that the total subscriptions will reach nearly $250,000 and that nearly a score of companies have subscribed 100 per cent. The subscription to the fourth Liberty Loan exceeded by nearly $200,000 the subscriptions to the third Liberty Loan.

The "submarine" barometer, displayed in the Y. M. C. A. hut shows that the "Kaiser" has been "sunk" theoretically as fast as he could come to the surface. During the latter days of the campaign it was a daily occurrence for a new company to "subscribe 150 per cent." and hit the "Kaiser" and the "submarine" squarely. Now the nose is kept busy mowing down fishing lines of Oxford, England, addressed the Radio students Sunday afternoon, and his remarks attended to more centered his remarks chiefly on the moral aims of the war.

PRAISE VICTORY OF N. E. LOAN WORKERS

Widespread praise of the excellent work of the New England Liberty Loan Committee was voiced today in every locality following the announcement that the Fighting Fourth Liberty Loan had gone over the top by a handsome margin.

The tireless work of this great organization, many of whose members leave stock to the task of raising four successive Liberty Loans, has won deserved admiration from citizens in all walks of life. Not the least of the encomiums received by the committee are those from officials high in the councils of the nation.

Despite the fact of well nigh insurmountable obstacles, the New England Liberty Loan Committee, headed by Executive Chairman N. Penrose Hallowell, has fought and won one of the greatest victories in the history of modern finance. More than $1,000,000,000 was subscribed in nineteen days.

When it became apparent that New England was to be deprived of the many aids to a successful public presentation of the demands of the loan because of the epidemic, the New England committee never wavered. Instead their energies were directed at a moment's notice into other less spectacular, yet fortunately as fine and effective channels.

The adaptability and resourcefulness of the entire personnel of the big committee proved an agreeable surprise to even the most sanguine. From Chairman Hallowell down to the humblest stenographer, every member of the Liberty Loan family at No. 40 Broad street contributed his best and most enthusiastic work to the gigantic task of making the world safe for democracy by helping to raise the "fighting" dollars for Uncle Sam.

Confronted in turn by the influenza epidemic, the ban on all public assemblages, the two German peace notes, and the suspension of liberator rites of the Two Hundred Division sent to boom the campaign in the rural districts, the New England committee never faltered. Through the daily press and the printed word, moved a long the non-partisan lines of the New England Liberty Loan Committee, the people of the district pushed the subscription total steadily upward day following day, finally succeeding in awarding to Governor Coolidge the coveted pennant.

The part played by Governor Coolidge, Secretary McAdoo, the New England Federal Reserve Bank, deserves special mention. His personal appeals, his visits to all parts of the state, the enormous totals from day to day added much to the speed with which the figures were made public.

John K. Allen, chairman of publicity; Herbert S. Underwood, press chairman; Robert S. Weeks, in charge of the activities of "the cottage with the painted sign Boston Common; Barrett Wendell, jr., in charge of publicity material; posters, etc., and Frederick Winsor, in charge of the speakers' bureau, have all contributed much to the success, share the honor and glory of the New England Liberty Loan. Little room for doubt is left as to the ultimate success of the Fourth Liberty Loan in the New England district.

Members of the Committee of Public Information, Department of the United War Work Campaign, urges that the following notice be removed as soon as possible.

NEW RADIO SCHOOL TO HOLD NIGHT SESSIONS

Greater Boston's second radio school was scheduled to be opened tonight. The new school is a free institution, established by the United States Government in the Naval Militia Armory, Mechanics Building, on Huntington avenue. The establishment of the new school was made necessary by the urgent demand of the Government for radio operators. The classes of instruction will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings.

PROGRESSIVE!

The Boston American Is a Progressive Newspaper
Its Readers Are Progressive Men and Women
Its Circulation Is Progressive in Quality and Quantity

A PROGRESSIVE newspaper—that is the Boston American.

It is always adopting some progressive policy which is resented by the ultra-conservative element—which is a self-satisfied stand-pat element.

The fact that the Boston American's progressive policies are ever justified by events and eventually become the accepted conservative policy has nothing to do with the situation, because these policies are always resented in the beginning anyhow, no matter how sound they may be.

Certain ultra conservative advertisers are apt to look askance at a progressive newspaper.

But a progressive newspaper has a progressive following, and a progressive following means the young, active, aggressive, thoughtful and successful element of the community.

This is the most valuable clientele for a newspaper AND FOR AN ADVERTISER.

It represents the element in the community that is thinking, striving and succeeding, which is progressing mentally and materially.

It is these people who are making money, acquiring more property and buying more things.

It is these people who are taking particular advantage of the present mobile state of affairs.

They are the young, forward-facing element of the community.

These are the men of today and of tomorrow.

Your old, staid, set, opinionated reactionaries are the men of the past.

They have done their work.

They have very largely gotten all they want and bought all they want.

They are inaccessible to new ideas, to new enterprises, to new articles or to new advertisements.

They buy what they have been in the habit of buying whether it is advertised or not.

As far as advertisers are concerned they are as sterile as an outworked farm is to the agriculturist.

The Boston American's progressive readers is the fertile field for advertisers to cultivate.

They are the men who are looking around for something new and something good. Their families follow in their footsteps. The money the fathers make the mothers spend readily for household betterments.

They are demanding and obtaining what is new and what is good, and all the advertiser has to do is to address them intelligently and convincingly, and NOT UNDERESTIMATE their shrewdness or their purchasing power.

The Boston American offers this clientele, and it is the best clientele open to the advertiser who has the business acumen to appeal to it.

WANGENHEIM TELLS HOW WAR STARTED

Meanwhile Wangenheim had accomplished his great diplomatic success. From his yacht the Corcovado as a wireless station via the Bosphorus he was sending the most agreeable news to Admiral Souchon, telling him to hoist the Turkish flag when he reached the Strait. These cruisers were no longer the Goeben and the Breslau, for, like an oriental magician, Wangenheim had suddenly changed them into the Sultan Selim and the Medjidi. The fact was that the German ambassador had cleverly taken advantage of the existing situation to manufacture a "sale."

As I have already told, Turkey had two dreadnaughts under construction in England when the war broke out. They were to be the agencies through which Turkey was to attack Greece and win back the islands of the Aegean. At the very moment when the war began, Turkey had made her last payment to the English shipyards and the Turkish crews had arrived in England prepared to take the finished vessels home. Then a few days before the time set to deliver them, the British government stepped in and commandeered these dreadnaughts for the British navy.

There is not the slightest question that England had not only a legal, but a moral right to do this; there is also no question that her action was a proper one.

But the transaction gave Wangenheim the greatest opportunity of his life. Violent attacks upon England, all emanating from the Turkish embassy, began to fill the Turkish press. Wangenheim was constantly discoursing to the Turkish leaders on English perfidy and he now suggested that Germany, Turkey's only friend, was prepared to make compensation for England's "unlawful" seizure. He suggested that Turkey accept from the form of "purchasing" the Goeben and the Breslau, which, were then wandering around the Mediterranean, perhaps in anticipation of this very contingency, and incorporate them in the Turkish navy in place of the appropriated ships in England. The very day that these vessels passed through the Dardanelles, the Tasdam, a Turkish newspaper, published in Constantinople, had a triumphant account of this "sale," with big headlines calling it a "great success for the Imperial Government."

Thus Wangenheim's manoeuvre accomplished two purposes: It placed Germany before the populace as Turkey's friend, and it also provided a subterfuge for getting the ships through the Dardanelles, and enabling them to remain in Turkish waters.

We all knew from the beginning that this sale was a sham. The German government made no real pretention that the sale had been bona fide; at least when the Greek Minister at Berlin protested against the transaction as unfriendly to Greece—naively forgetting the American ships which Greece had recently purchased—the German officials soothed him by admitting, sotto voce, that the ownership still remained with Germany. Yet when the Entente Ambassadors constantly protested against the presence of the German vessels, the Turkish officials blandly kept up the pretence that they were integral parts of the Turkish navy.

I have often speculated on what would have happened if the English battle cruisers, which pursued the Breslau and Goeben up to the mouth of the Dardanelles, had not been too gentlemanly to violate international law. Suppose that they had entered the Strait, attacked the German cruisers in the Sea of Marmora, and sunk them. They could have done this, and, knowing all that we know now, such an action would have been justified. Not improbably the destruction would have kept Turkey out of the war. For the arrival of these cruisers made it inevitable that Turkey, when the proper moment came, should join her forces with Germany.

The story was told in Constantinople—though I do not vouch for it as authentic history—that the cabinet meeting at which the momentous decision had been made, the Grand Vizier and Djemal objected to the fictitious "sale," and demanded that it should not be completed. When the discussion had reached its height Enver, who was playing Germany's game, announced that he had already practically completed the transaction. In the silence that followed his statement this young Napoleon pulled out his pistol and laid it on the table.

"If anyone here wishes to question this purchase," he said quietly and icily, "I am ready to meet him."

A few weeks after the Goeben and the Breslau had taken up permanent headquarters in the Bosphorus, Djavid Bey, Minister of Finance, happened to meet a distinguished Belgian jurist, then in Constantinople.

"I have terrible news for you," said the sympathetic Turkish statesman. "The Germans have captured Brussels."

The Belgian, a huge figure, more than six feet high, put his arm soothingly upon the shoulder of the diminutive Turk.

"I have even more terrible news for you," he said, pointing out to the stream where the Goeben and the Breslau lay anchored. "The Germans have captured Turkey."

CHAPTER VII.

LIKE TOY WEATHER PROPHET

But there was one quarter in which this transaction produced no appreciable gloom. That was the German Embassy. This great "success" fairly intoxicated the impressionable Wangenheim, and other happenings now aroused his furor Teutonicus to a fever heat. The Goeben and the Breslau arrived almost at the same time that the Germans captured Liege, Namur and other Belgian towns. And now followed the German sweep into France and the apparently triumphant rush to Paris. In all these happenings Wangenheim, like the militant Prussian that he was, saw the fulfilment of a forty years' dream. We were all still living in the Summer embassies along the Bosphorus.

Wangenheim would buttonhole his friends, or those whom he regarded as his friends, and have his little jollifications over German victories. I noticed this was only when the German armies were winning; if news came of a reverse, Wangenheim was utterly invisible. This led me to remark that he reminded me of a toy weather prophet, which has a man outside the box when the weather is fine but which retires within when storms are gathering. Wangenheim appreciated my little joke as keenly as the rest of the diplomatic set.

I those earnly days, however, the weather for the German ambassador was distinctly favorable. The good fortune of the German armies so excited him that he was sometimes led into indiscretions, and his exuberance one day caused him to tell me certain facts which, I think, will always have great historical value. He disclosed precisely how and when Germany had precipitated this war. Today his revelation of this secret looks like a most monstrous indiscretion, but we must remember Wangenheim's state of mind at the time. The whole world then believed that Paris was doomed and Wangenheim reflected this attitude in his frequent declarations that the war would be over in two or three months. The whole German enterprise was evidently progressing according to program.

I have already mentioned that the German Ambassador had left for Berlin soon after the assassination of the Grand Duke, and he now revealed the cause of his sudden disappearance. The Kaiser, he told me, had summoned him to Berlin for an Imperial conference. This meeting took place at Potsdam on July 5th. The Kaiser presided and nearly all the important ambassadors attended. Wangenheim himself was summoned to give assurance about Turkey and enlighten his associates generally on the situation in Constantinople, which was then regarded as almost the pivotal point in the impending war.

In telling me who attended this conference Wangenheim used no names, though he specifically said that among them were—the facts are so important that I quote his exact words in the German which he used—"die Kaupter des Generalstabs und der Marine"—(The heads of the general staff and of the navy), by which I have assumed that he meant Von Moltke and Von Tirpitz. The great bankers, railroad directors, and the captains of German industry, all of whom were as necessary to German war preparations as the army itself, also attended.

Wangenheim now told me that the Kaiser solemnly put the question to each man in turn. "Are you ready for war?" All replied "Yes" except the financiers. They said that they must have two weeks to sell their foreign securities and to make loans. At that time few people had looked upon the Sarajevo tragedy as something that would inevitably lead to war. This conference, Wangenheim told me, took all precautions that no such suspicion should be aroused. It decided to give the bankers time to readjust their finances for the coming war, and then the several members went quietly back to their work or started on vacations. The Kaiser went to Norway on his yacht.

Von Bethmann-Hollweg left for a rest, and Wangenheim returned to Constantinople.

In telling me about this conference Wangenheim, of course, admitted that Germany had precipitated the war. I think that he was rather proud of the whole performance, proud that Germany had gone about the matter in so methodical and far-seeing a way, and especially proud that he himself had been invited to participate in so momentous a gathering. I have often wondered why he revealed to me so momentous a secret. Whatever the motive, this indiscretion certainly had the effect of showing me who were really the guilty parties in this monstrous crime.

The Imperial Conference took place July 5 and the Serbian ultimatum was sent on July 22. That is just about the two weeks' interval which the financiers had demanded to complete their plans. All the great stock exchanges of the world show that the German bankers profitably used this interval. If any one wishes to verify Wangenheim, I would suggest that he examine the quotations of the New York stock market for these two historic weeks. He will find that there were astonishing slumps in prices, especially on the stocks that had an international market.

At last time the high protectionists were blaming the Simmons-Underwood tariff act as responsible for this fall in values, while other critics of the administration attributed it to the Federal Reserve Act—which had not yet been put into effect. How little the Wall Street brokers and the financial experts realized that an Imperial Conference, which had been held in Potsdam and presided over by the Kaiser, was the real force that was then depressing the market!

Wangenheim not only gave me the details of this Potsdam conference, but he disclosed the same secret to the Marquis Pallavicini, the Italian ambassador at Constantinople. Italy was at that time technically Germany's ally.

The Austrian Ambassador, the Marquis Pallavicini, also practically admitted that the Central Powers had anticipated the war. On August 15th, Francis Joseph's birthday, I made the usual ambassadorial visit of congratulation. Quite naturally the conversation turned upon the Emperor, who had that day passed his eighty-fourth year. Pallavicini spoke about him with the almost pride and veneration. He told me how keen-minded and clear-headed the aged Emperor was, how he had the most complete understanding of international affairs, and how he gave everything his personal supervision.

To illustrate the Austrian Kaiser's grasp of public events, Pallavicini instanced the present war. The previous May, Pallavicini had had an audience with Francis Joseph in Vienna. At that time, Pallavicini now told me, the Emperor had said that a European war was unavoidable. The Central Powers would not accept the Treaty of Bucharest as a settlement of the Balkan question, and only a general war, the Emperor had told Pallavicini, could ever settle that problem. The treaty of Bucharest, I may recall, was the settlement that ended the second Balkan war.

Most historians agree that the Treaty of Bucharest made inevitable this war. I have the Marquis Pallavicini's evidence that this was likewise the opinion of Francis Joseph himself. The audience at which the Emperor made this statement was held in May, more than a month before the assassination of the Grand Duke. Clearly, therefore, we have the Austrian Emperor's assurances that the war would have come irrespective of the assassination at Serajevo. It is quite apparent that this crime merely served as the convenient pretext for the war in which the Central Empires had already decided.

All through that eventful August and September Wangenheim continued his almost irresponsible behaviour—now blandly boastful, now depressed, always nervous and high strung, ingratiating to an American like myself, sullenly and petty toward the representatives of the enemy powers.

He would never miss an opportunity to spread the news of victories, several times he adopted the unusual course of coming to my house unannounced, to tell me of the latest developments and to read me extracts from messages which he had just received. He was always apparently frank, direct and even indiscreet.

I remember his great distress the day that England declared war. Wangenheim had already professed a great admiration for England and, especially, for America. "There are only three great countries," he would say over and over again, "Germany, England and the United States. With these should get together; then we could rule the world." This enthusiasm for the British Empire was suddenly cooled when that power decided to defend her treaty pledges and declared war. Wangenheim had said that this conflict would be a short one and that Sedan day would be celebrated in Paris. But on August 5, I called at his embassy and found him more than usually agitated and serious. Baroness Wangenheim, a tall, handsome woman, was sitting in the room reading her autobiography of the war of 1870. Both regarded the news from England as almost a personal grievance, and what impressed me most was Wangenheim's utter failure to understand England's motives. "It's mighty poor politics on her part!" he exclaimed over and over again. His attitude was precisely the same as that of Bethmann-Hollweg with the "scrap of paper."

I was out for a stroll on August 20th, and happened to meet the German Ambassador. He began to talk to me about the German victories in France, repeating, as was now his habit, his prophecy that the German armies would be in Paris within a week. The deciding factor in this war, he added, would be the Krupp artillery. "And remember that this time," he said, "we are making war. And we shall make it ruthlessly (without any consideration). We shall not be hampered as we were in 1870. Then Queen Victoria, the Czar, and Francis Joseph interfered and prevented us from entering Paris. But there is no one to interfere now. We shall move on Berlin all the Parisian art treasures will belong to the state, just as Napoleon took Italian art works to France."

It is quite evident that the battle of the Marne saved Paris from the fate of Louvain.

A SERIAL OF EAST AND WEST

Mrs. Miller Tells Elizabeth That Butler Is Not Apt to Return Very Soon

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER LIV.

Copyright, 1913, Star company

"WOULD Elizabeth Wade like to gather her scattered wits—that is, must he or Mrs. Chapin thinks best. Ask her that—why—do you think it's necessary to have Mr. Miller here? I mean—you see, we will have Mr. Butler—by evening, anyway—and if Mr. Miller would rather stay at home—"

She stopped abruptly, arrested by the gleam of interest that had crept into the neighbor's eyes. Mrs. Miller came half way up the flight of stairs where Elizabeth stood, and when she spoke it was in a stage whisper:

"But, my dear Miss Wade, you see it ain't likely that Mr. Butler will be here again—that is, not just yet. At least, that's what my Sam says. But he thinks it's too bad, for he's a lovely young man. And Amos was always queer, anyway. But, there! I'll let you go on and read your letter now. There'll be time enough to talk about all this later."

Elizabeth Wade went into her own room, gripping John Butler's letter tightly. It seemed the one thing for her to hold fast to.

Some instinct made her turn the key in the door behind her, who could not endure the possibility of any one's intruding on her privacy. Then she sat down and, with trembling hands, tore open the envelope she held.

"My darling," she read.

Her first love letter—as a girl she had dreamed of the man who would some day write to her like this.

In her dazed condition she had almost forgotten her anxieties and fears. Now both rushed back upon her like a mighty flood, as she read what her lover had to tell her.

He was being detained pending further investigation into the death of Amos Chapin. That was all he told her, but it. To the girl the sentence meant but one thing.

John was accused of murder. He would be tried, perhaps found guilty, by a group of men who knew nothing about him. He might even be—

She started to her feet in an agony of terror. Then, with a sharp self-reproach, she sat down again.

"For his sake I must keep sane," she muttered.

Slowly she read the closely written pages. Investigations of the course the bullet had taken showed that the dead man could not have been self-inflicted, a fact in favor of which was the powder's very present.

"We know they are wrong, dear, wrong—and truth must conquer eventually. But, oh, my darling, I do not know whether this is accidental or not. It may have been that the man, driven by rage, perhaps he took up the pistol with the idea of self-defense, and in his agitation pulled the trigger.

"Yet it is strange that I do not remember seeing him touch the thing as he came toward me. Perhaps I, too, was so much excited that it escaped my notice. I recall bracing myself for his attack, and thinking that I must not strike an elderly man, even in self-defense.

"Then there was a blinding flash and no fell. In falling he must have flung the pistol upon the table again. It is all like an evil dream to me. I know my explanation sound insane and ridiculous. It will sound so to the jurors who will try my case.

"You and Mrs. Chapin will be called as witnesses, of course, and I would counsel you all to say the truth, my darling. My fear is not for myself, but for you—for that this knock will make you ill. My poor girl, my wretchedly unhappy. I am thankful your brother is coming. You must do just what he tells you to do.

"Meanwhile there are the countless delays of the law. You have heard of them. So have I. I have spoken lightly, jestingly of them. I shall never do so again.

"Do not worry about me, dearest. I am comfortable here in this little country jail. Later, of course, I do not know, and I must be patient and await developments. I will try to write you regularly.

"Write to me if you can, please dear. I will tell the man who takes this to wait for an answer."

Then there followed repetitions of his love for her and his regret at what he was compelling her to suffer—his desire that she try to be happy in spite of all that had happened.

Not a word of self-pity. Not a word of his fear for himself. And his life was in danger.

Elizabeth sat motionless for some time. She felt unable to make any muscular effort. At last she dragged herself to her feet. Her limbs were numb, her brain dazed. But she must force herself to write something to this man who depended upon her love.

TO the little mountain village which Edwin and her husband had picked out as an ideal spot for their honeymoon was a seven-hour run by a leisurely train. The sun was still high when they stood on the narrow platform waiting for the stage that was to take them on a five-mile drive into the high, wooded country.

Everywhere was peace and quiet—the clang of street cars, the clamor of traffic seemed years away. They were the only passengers, and as they sat looking out over the changing panorama each felt that the real way was like a dream, unreal, impossible. Only the little service days, with their proud years, that hung from the windows of the isolated house, brought back the grim reality.

"And I'm quite sure in less than a week you would be calling, Robin," said Elaine with a little sigh. "But I wouldn't have it otherwise for worlds. He pressed the hand he held in his. "I never look at myself, Elaine, that I don't wonder if I am a slacker—every man feels he ought to be in action—I have explained that to my child, and yet he is adamant."

The driver turned to ask them for news. "I've got a boy at the front," he said with pride, "one of the first to enlist there was. Had a letter from him the other day. I tell you, we're going to show them Germans what's what before we're through!"

Pine Tree Inn was built on a knoll, and on the veranda, as the stage came to a halt, stood the smiling woman whose hospitality Bob had sampled before the war.

GOLDEN-EYES AND BILL

Of course you're thrilled with "Golden Eyes" as she's your bronco-ly adventurous, pert Frances, after her hero "Bill," and accompanied by his faithful colie, "Uncle Sam." She is an ambulance driver and more than once has got into the thick of things—and had hair-breadth escapes. Her adventures will continue to be one of the most interesting features of the Magazine Section, as they appear each Sunday pictorially described in full color in Nell Brinkley's own inimitable fashion. BOSTON SUNDAY ADVERTISER AND AMERICAN

New Evening Capes

By Rita Stuyvesant

AS the social season opens one is surprised at the number of formal evening affairs that are being scheduled. But perhaps it is because of the desire of the American woman to entertain our Army and Navy men before they go overseas. The light, flimsy gowns that are worn at the dances and dinner parties require some sort of a warm wrap over them, if one is to guard against the chill November winds.

All rather dark colors are used, because wraps of this kind can be worn both afternoon and evening. Never before have so many women made their own clothes as this year, and with exceptionally good results.

A lovely evening wrap recently seen at a benefit dance was of navy blue triciolette and had been made at home with the assistance of a dressmaker. It was a stunning model, cut on straight lines. A big rolled collar was buttoned high around the throat, while the bottom was finished with deep chenille fringe. Very soft and luxurious was this garment and not at all difficult to fashion.

Deep purple would also be unusually effective and is beautiful in the silk triciolette.

Soft broadcloth in the new henna shade was used in designing a beautiful cape. It was made on a round yoke, and fell in pretty gathers from the shoulders. The convertible collar was outlined in rich black velvet, and the bottom of the cape also showed the velvet trimming. Deep slits were cut for the arms to pass through, at a convenient length. For a promenade on the avenue, or to cover the Red Cross costume, this warm cape would truly be serviceable.

Liberty blue velour de laine was made up into another smart wrap. This was a draped military model decorated with a silver buckle. It was shaped around the neck, and hung in graceful folds. The lower right corner was brought up, draped and caught on the left shoulder with a buckle. A lining of the same shade was used.

For those who can afford the extravagance of a light colored wrap this model might be developed in a lovely chamois shade and lined with a soft orchid satin and a buckle of the same color.

Pale pink broadcloth makes an adorable cape for a debutante. A deep yoke carefully shaped over the shoulders is very youthful. The lower part is attached with a beading about an inch deep. Pretty pink taffeta streamers fasten this dainty wrap at the throat and are finished with silk tassels. A novel feature of this dainty garment is the deep, knotted silk fringe that borders the bottom. No lining was needed in this light wrap.

When a Girl Marries

A New Serial of Young Wedded Life

Neal Helps Anne Do the Housework in Order to Get It Out of the Way

By ANN LISLE

CHAPTER XXXII.

(Copyright, 1913, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SUNDAY was a riot of blue skies and golden sunlight and soft breezes that whispered gay little invitations to come out and play. After breakfast my husband hurried off to keep his appointment with a man up-State, and Neal and I fell upon the dishes and washed and dried them and gossiped with a vim.

"Say, Babbsie, at the rate we're going we won't be done when that husband of yours gets back. Say, he's a winner! He can have me all right if he'll always treat me as white as he did this morning, Lady Evelyn says it won't hurt for me to kind of follow his lead once in a while. She thinks he's all right, too," said Neal, turning mattresses with brisk vigor.

A minute later he added:

"I've a date with—her today. Say, spunk' you finish your room and I do mine and we see who beats. Otherwise, we'll never get through."

"Righto, Neal-o! Only it's no fair leaving dust in corners," I agreed light-heartedly. Hadn't my young brother just called my husband a winner? If my boys liked each other, if we had our own happy little family group, if Jim found work—then Jim and I would come close, close; we would be woven into the very pattern of each other's daily lives, and I would never again have the pang of feeling the "outsider." His old life would slip away into a background of unimportant memory and his real life would date from the hour he had found me.

I dreamed as I worked, and little snatches of song rose to my lips. I wonder if every woman longs as I do to be all-in-all to the man she loves? I must mean everything to my Jim—as he does to me.

Quickly and deftly my happy fingers completed their tasks.

"I win, Neal," I cried, actually hippity-hopping to the door of the living room.

Began to Sing

There stood Neal over by the big, carved Florentine chest. Its lid was thrown back, and in my brother's hands was the shimmering blue and green robe Tom Mason had—given me. I dashed across the room and tried to snatch the lustrous thing from Neal's hands. But Neal turned, twisted it from my grasp and swung the silk high above his head where it winked at me evilly.

"Tush, tush, Barbara Anne, why this unseemly haste?" questioned my brother in a teasing voice.

"Give it to me! Give it to me!" I cried.

"Come and take it," laughed Neal, sliding across the floor and brandishing the flashing robe above his head.

"Don't tease, Neal—give it to me!" I cried in exasperation that was almost tearful.

Then his teasing look turned suddenly to an earnest one.

"What do you want to do with this—thingumabob, Babbsie?"

"I want to hide it away!"

"Hide it? From whom?"

"From myself, Neal."

"Sure it's not from your husband?"

"Neal! What do you mean?"

"I want to know what you mean, Babbsie—having all this heavy, embroidered stuff made into some sort of a dress and hidden away," said my brother, sternly.

And as I faced the sturdy determination in his young eyes I knew with relief that at last I was going to tell the story of that "haunted" robe! And when I had told him how Tom Mason had made me a gift—an unwelcome one—but still a gift—or that priceless robe, my brother was fairly furious. He stormed out that I must send it back, at once, and that he'd fix any one who dared insult his sister by forcing presents of clothes upon her.

"Neal, you're right. You and I have different standards. We aren't new-fashioned city folk, but simple, homey country people—and I'm going to be what I am as honestly as I can. Now, put the robe away, dear. I'll tell my husband about it as soon as he comes in, and then he and I together will send it back to Mr. Mason."

Neal kissed me, hugging me tight.

No Disappointment

"You need some one to look out for you, Babbsie—some one who understands you. Maybe it's going to turn out for the best that I came."

This disquieted me. Did Neal mean to insinuate that Jim didn't understand me? And why should his coming to New York not turn out well?

I tied his tie, helped him smooth down the rebellious waves of his flamboyant red hair and sent him off to join his "Lady Evelyn." Then I got my mending and stitched a little of my love into the crisscross of Jim's socks. At noon I put the roast of lamb into the oven. At one I began peeling the potatoes and carrots—a fine hot dinner should be awaiting my boy when he returned—that would refresh him and help him over disappointment perhaps.

But there was no disappointment. Even my boy's limp had lost some of its weary drag, for as he hurried in a few moments later, he shouted boyishly that he had a job.

"Tomorrow Neal and I start off for the workingman's life together," he cried, enveloping me in a bear hug. "Little brother has nothing on me.....I'm inspector in a cap factory. Don't know anything about caps—or inspecting, but this pays eighteen hundred a year and may lead right to the presidency."

After our first rejoicing was over, I pulled Jim down at my side on the big couch and told him the story of the blue robe. At first I didn't dare raise my eyes to his face—the words came stumbling out in cold panic. I sat staring out ahead of me with cold hands clasped—then, for comfort, I reached over and seized the lapels of Jim's coat and dragged my eyes up to his. He was smiling!

"You aren't angry?" I gasped. Neal had been so very angry.

"Angry?" Jim gently kept his hands down and caught my wrists—he lifted them and laid a kiss in each palm. "Poor little frightened girl—did she think her big tyrant husband had shut her up in a Bluebeard tower?"

"Would let me accept presents from other men?" I gasped in a whirl.

Jim threw back his head and fairly shouted. "Take all you can get—kiddie. That's the law of society. Of course, I wouldn't have you push that to extremes. But the robe was right here in the apartment and Tom threw it in as part of the rent. He's rich—it won't hurt him to be a little generous to us."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Take Her to Theatre

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

While on a week-end at a Summer hotel I met a very charming young lady, whom I learned to care for very much; I also met her mother and father. I have found out where she lives, and I am writing to ask you if you think it would be proper for me to invite her to see a play some evening; also how to go about it, as I am very backward in social matters. M. T.

IT would be quite proper for you to invite the young lady to go to the theatre, particularly as you have met her mother and father. Write her a little note and ask her what play she would like to see.

Bring Him to the Point

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very fond of a young man who seems to care for me, but he is afraid to tell me, and I can't bring him to confess his love—he just will not. He never comes to my house without bringing a friend with him. Could you tell me any way I could win this young man? M. C.

THIS young man of yours seems abnormally cautious since he will not come to see you unless reinforced by a friend. There is really nothing to do but have patience and wait until you have tamed him a little more.

Wives Slighted

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Kindly answer my question in your column. Why do they always mention the name of mother and never that of wife, in regard to soldiers and sailors? I have noticed in all the speeches and songs that I have heard the name of a soldier's wife is never mentioned. Why is she not considered in war time?

A SOLDIER'S WIFE.

HAVE you never heard of the soldier's and sailor's toast, "Sweethearts and wives"? No mention at all of mother here. I think the word wife must have just happened to escape you, as I have heard it repeatedly in songs and addresses.

Cadum Ointment

has proved a blessing to thousands who have suffered for years from irritating and stubborn skin troubles. It stops the itching at once and is very healing and soothing wherever the skin is irritated or inflamed. Much suffering from skin trouble may be avoided by the use of this wonderful remedy. Cadum Ointment is good for eczema, pimples, blotches, itch, scaly skin, eruptions, chafings, sores, rash, scabs, ringworm, cuts, sores, burns, insect bites, etc.

IF THE WORLD KNEW THIS

Much Suffering Would Stop. Tells of a Home-Mixed Medicine for Colds, Coughs, Bronchitis, Etc.

The Blackburn Products Co.

Dear Sirs—As I was mixing some more of the Mentho-Laxene in syrup this morning I could not help but wonder if you really knew what a wonderful cold remedy it is, even if you do put it up.

Last fall we were really worried about my husband, as he had tried so many remedies, and the doctor did not help him at all, when one day he happened to read an ad of your Mentho-Laxene and he said: "I will give it a trial, then give up. I guess, if it doesn't help me." But, can you believe it? He began to feel easier right away, and long before the first bottle was gone he was all over his terrible cough, and by taking a little when feeling hoarse just a little we both have warded off every bit of colds and coughs since, until Monday of this week, he got his feet so wet and by night he coughed again quite badly, but this morning he was o. k. again.

This is for you to do as you see how quickly it worked.

We have gotten ever so many others to use it by giving them a sample of ours.

This is just a line to tell you how grateful we both are to you and your remedy.

Yours truly,
MRS. GEORGE E. GATIS,

Resinol

the tested skin treatment

"Resinol is what you want for your skin-trouble—Resinol to stop the itching and burning—Resinol to heal the eruption. This gentle ointment has been so effective for years in treating eczema, ring worm, itching, burning rashes, and sores, that it has become a standard skin treatment. It contains nothing that could irritate the tenderest skin."

Your druggist will also tell you that Resinol Ointment is excellent for relieving the smart, itch, and burn of mosquito-bites, and insect-stings. It soothes and cools skins burned by wind or sun. All dealers sell Resinol Ointment.

Men who use Resinol Shaving Stick find soothing lotions unnecessary.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs WITHOUT DIETING OR EXERCISING often at the rate of over a pound a day and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practising physician and personally select the treatment for each individual case, thus enabling me to choose remedies that will produce not only a loss of weight harmlessly, but which will also relieve you of all the troublesome symptoms of overstoutness such as shortness of breath, palpitation, indigestion, rheumatism, gout, asthma, kidney trouble and various other afflictions which often accompany overstoutness.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you renewed energy and vigor, a result of the loss of your superfluous fat.

You are not required to change in the slightest from your regular mode of living. There is no dieting or exercising. It is simple, easy and pleasant to take.

If you are overstout, do not postpone, but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and relief will surely follow. I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

NOTED SWIMMER FILMED AS MERMAID

A NNETTE KELLERMANN, appearing on the screen at the Park Theatre this week, in "Queen of the Seas."

©Underwood and Underwood, N.Y.

A real coup for Manager Thomas Soriato in the booking at the Park Theatre is the regular appearance of the latest Annette Kellermann production, "Queen of the Seas," during the William Fox contracts. Added last Summer at the Harbor and other popular resorts, the Kellermann pictures have become a regular dramatic attraction. This picture is said to be the best received and liked of the six pictures.

One of the most interesting features of "Queen of the Seas" are the underwater pictures. The scenes of Annette Kellermann's swimming contests with sharks, devil fish and other denizens of the deep are said to be unusually realistic. The mermaid ballet is composed of real mermaids.

CASTLE SQUARE TO AGAIN HOUSE STOCK COMPANY

The Castle Square Theatre is again to have a stock company, and patrons of the house which for years has made their home there can set down October 7 as the first day of the season. The artistic director of the new company will be William H. Wadsworth, who has been a stage director in the country and once a very valued member of the old Castle Square stock company.

The new management has engaged a number of well-known actors to head the company, which promises to be a strong one, including many favorites of the past and present.

RACING AND BOXING TO PROSPER

All Signs Point to Professional Sport Having Big Inning After War Is Won

By H. W. LANIGAN.

When the war is over professional sport will come into its own, experience a wonderful come-back in this country, in fact, racing and boxing, the two outstanding professional activities, will in all likelihood be more attractive, and more profitable than ever before.

Both sports were sliding downhill. Cheaters and grafters were sending them pell mell into obscurity. State after State legislated against racing and boxing; and the legislation was necessary, so rotten had they become in the hands of New York, shut down to raising for some five or six years, as against the honors by thoroughbreds in Kentucky, Louisiana and Arkansas were also operating, and Maryland, Missouri is all prepared to bring the sport back, in fact, it had a fairly successful meeting last Fall.

CAUSED THEIR OWN TROUBLE.

California and Illinois are the only States formerly in the racing column which remain "dark." The games in and around Chicago and at San Francisco and Los Angeles were second only in importance to the old New York article. But as many jobs affect horses, were paired, the communities just had to order the show closed up.

It has been the same with boxing. New York, Chicago and the California cities were long the centers of the big fights, the Bankers and the big fight operators. They did so much cheating, were so far in the hands of the New York has since attempted to bring the Queensberry game back, but had lost prestige, as they deserve, and six months or so ago the bill was jammed down again.

Boxing, Philadelphia, all the New Jersey commissioning was recently legalized in the shape of Jersey Jumbles, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and New Orleans are the best of the boxing centers, and they are all are opening up to the sport and States preparing to pass bills legalizing the art of self defense.

Professional sport champions are confident that conservancy will be agreeable, and complete fifty race course Saturday is going to prove a big boon to the sport, as it will be the Spalding from the seats of the grandstand to gratified the turf brigade for the time being, and the interest of the Fourth Liberty Loan.

TURPEEN RESCUED NOBLY.

He asked them to DIG and DIG and GIVE and GIVE, and they did it to the limit, though for the past four weeks they had been overtaxed. While it looked as if Roomers 121-ward J. Ryan, the promoter, Lenny and Jack Adler, of "all right" fame had secured all subscriptions possible from the turf colony, they kicked in with some generous donations following Governor Whitman's appeal.

James Butler, president of the Empire City Racing Association, led off with $50,000, Johnny McKewan, Chanie Whitney and Pete Bradley for $40,000, Congressman George W. Loft, owner of Papp, 1917 Futurity winner, added $25,000 to his original subscription of $75,000. Arnold Rothstein, king of modern finance, also put his name down for $20,000 more, making his total $125,000.

Other prominent turfmen who subscribed liberally are Eugene E. Wood, $150,000; P. A. Clark, $2,500; Willis Sharpe Kilmer, $100,000; Harry Bassford, $45,000; E. G. Soule, $40,000; Sidney (Charley) Brown, $40,000; Tom Shaw, $40,000; Edward J. Ryan, $20,000 and R. C. Doggett, $20,000.

Meehan Is not Much, Even Though He Has It on Dempsey

By RINGSIDE.

Until Slapper Billy Meehan met and outpointed Jack Dempsey, Fred Fulton's barry-in-ouverer, in a four-round skirmish not in the least to the liking of boxing fans and him figured of little account.

Now Slapper Bill is posing as the world's heavyweight champion. Prance and Meehan fought all of 20 to 1 he cannot whip Dempsey over anything but a return match, and not much of a chance against Jess Willard as Kansas Jack's showing against him also probably outclassed by Billy Miske. Battling Levinsky, Harry Greb, Kid Norfolk, Sore Langford, Joe Jeannette and some six or eight other baskies who could be mentioned.

Meehan has fought fifty fights and, with the exception of two, were all four rounds or less. Only four times did he go the twenty-round route. He won one four and got a draw in the other three.

Eleven times he has gone ten rounds and of these battles three were draws, seven he won and one he lost to Bob McAllister.

During his stay visit East, he was in 1917, Meehan fought an decision battles at Philadelphia with Jack Dillon and Leo Houck, and here in Boston went twelve rounds with Tom Cowler.

Meehan's real name is Gene Talcott. He was born in San Francisco some twenty-five years ago.

No Baseball Before '20, Then New Make-Up, Declares Big Ban

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, announces he would oppose any suggestion to resume pennant races before 1920.

"Baseball in war first and then play ball," was his terse comment.

"I am going to urge American League club owners, when they hold their annual meeting in December, to begin to get ready the thought of operating next year," Johnson said.

"I believe that now is the time for everyone in the country, who is a genuine patriot, to put his shoulder to the wheel and not think of anything that does not have to do with winning the war.

"Personally, I believe the war will be won before the end of next year, and I believe that everyone, for instance, or anyone else, should leave undone a single act that will help to bring about the conclusion of the struggle.

"Baseball realizes that the big leagues have greatly assisted before organized baseball began another season, and I am sure baseball will have nothing to say about slashing a necessary adjustment that will mean a wider personnel, laws and conditions that have retarded the game.

SELGIAN SOCCER TEAM TO JOIN SPORT DRIVE

The champion soccer team of the Belgian army, which was to have played in the United States last Spring for a series of games to benefit Belgian relief funds, is expected to arrive early in November. By arrangement with the War Department Committee on Training Camp Activities, King Albert's premier team will play a series of games the week of November 11-18, playing a series of matches with the leading soccer teams of the East, which also was work campaign.

W. W. Roper, secretary of the committee, formally announced the forthcoming arrangements for the Belgian soccer team's visit when in Washington last week.

SERGT. ALBRIGHT BEST IN WAKEFIELD TOURNEY

Sergeant William Albright of the United States Marine Corps carried off the honors in the two-day tournament of the National Rifle Association at Wakefield. He won the 200 slow fire, 300 rapid fire and 200 expert. Sergeant Schoenly, of the First Motor Corps, M. S. C., equalled Sergeant Albright's score in the 200-yard slow fire, but was defeated in the shoot-off.

Seaman Munroe of the Rumford, R. I., Naval Reserve won the 50-yard pistol match. W. J. Murphy of Haverhill excelled in the 300-yard rapid fire, making 290 points, with eleven consecutive bull's-eyes.

OLD TUFTS STAR HERO OF BRAVES FIELD GAME

A big crowd turned out for Sunday afternoon's football game between Boston Base and Hingham Ammunition Station on Braves Field. The play was rapid and keen, with the former eleven winning, 6-0 on Mitchell, former Tufts hero, and Benson starred for Boston Base, while Ned Sarkisian, Boston Latin High's former heroes, was the best man on the field for Hingham.

CORBETT'S CORNER

BY JAMES J. CORBETT.

This is the final chapter of a series which Mr. Corbett is writing concerning his great fight with James J. Jeffries in 1900. In this series of articles Mr. Corbett reveals to the public, for the first time, some of the dramatic and humorous features of that fight which, up to this time, were known only to his intimates.

The bell banged for the twenty-third round—and out I went, relaxed in every muscle of my body, to meet the onrushing Jim Jeffries. The big champion came tearing in at me, and drove a left-hander for my stomach. I pushed it aside partially and then backed away. Jeffries kept after me.

Jeffries chased me around the ring and, almost a victim, left for my head. Then I couldn't resist an opening which he had established him once more in the face. Blood came again from his nose and mouth.

Jeffries leaped at me and I landed once more to the body. Jeffries retaliated with a glancing right to the head. Then he rushed me again.

I backed toward the ropes. Jeffries aimed a vicious left for my head. I jumped backwards to avoid it.

And then it happened!

While I thought this happened I know only by hearsay. Those who were at the ringside have told me that as I jumped back to the ropes the tautness of them sent me reboundingly to meet Jeffries.

THE KNOCKOUT PUNCH.

The right hand swing of the big Californian had whizzed harmlessly past my face when I backed away. Then Jeffries swung with a left. Those who were at the ringside claim that this was a swing that Jeffries never really imagined would get home. And I never would have found its mark if there hadn't been a rebound of my body from those ropes.

But it so happened that I rebounded exactly in the pathway of that swinging left hook. My head-line fist caught me flush on the point of the chin—and I went down and out into unconsciousness, the loser of a fight that 99 per cent. of the ringside spectators felt absolutely confident I would win.

I remembered nothing from the moment that I backed away to dodge Jeffy's right lead until I returning to consciousness.

My refreshing senses were slow in absorbing the fact that I had been a knockout victim. The demonstration of this cousin of mine and the cheers of the crowd with the name of "Corbett" mixed in with it, made me think at first that I had won the fight.

Although, in a hazy sort of fashion, it seemed strange to me that if I won the fight I would be sitting in my corner while Jeffries was sitting upright in his seat bowing to some friends.

ONLY HEARD THE CHEERS.

The crowd was cheering for me all right—but not for Jim Corbett, then I was unconscious, cheering for me because I had put up such a fight for 22 rounds.

While I thought this happened, the crowd had cheered for Jim Jeffries sang then, as I was returning to a normal state of things, it decided to give me a cheer for the battle I had fought.

That's why I heard only Corbett cheers when I woke up—and so was confused.

Perhaps eight or ten seconds after I returned to consciousness, and while I was still unable to piece the real facts together, George Considine, one of my seconds, walked over to me from the other side of the ring. He had an odd look on his face.

George looked down at me for a few seconds, and before he had a chance to speak I said:

"Why the look of gloom, George?" I fought a great fight, didn't I?"

"Yes, Jim, you fought a wonderful fight—for 22 rounds. But—"

George relapsed into silence.

Then it began to dawn on me that something must have happened in the 23rd.

"What about the other rounds?" I asked.

"Well," said George, "you went great for 22 rounds, Jim, but you caught you on the chin with a left hook in the 23rd—and he knocked you out."

FIGHT results last night at Salem—

Eddie Carr of South Boston and Jimmy Hanlon boxed an eight-round draw. At Philadelphia Young Loughray had the better of Young Erne in six rounds. At New York—Joe Wagner defeated Frankie Neal in six rounds. Trey—Mike Grady outpointed Ed Tom Nelson in a ten-round bout. At Brooklyn—Charley Griffin of Australia defeated Eddie Wallace in a six-round bout. The latter lost Wallace from a knockout in the fourth round.

Navy Will Send Best Boxers to London for Tourney

Newport, R. I., Oct. 21.—The best boxers from Fly. as the English call it, to heavyweights in the United States Navy, will go to London to take part in fistic battles for the King's Trophy, which occurs December 11 and 12.

Admiral William S. Sims, who Commands the United States Naval forces in European waters, has asked the Navy Department to send over to London its best boxers and the request will be complied with as soon as commanding officers of fleets, ships, shore stations and all naval units have selected these men who will be sent to compete for the Kings' Trophy later on.

Both the French and English forces will have professional talent and the contest is open to all men of the allied armies and marines.

The Navy Department will later issue instructions as to how the men will go over to commanding officers.

HARVARD SQUADS GIVEN ONCE-OVER BY DONOVAN

Harvard's military and naval football squads were to report for inspection at the Stadium this afternoon. Thus far only 87 men have enrolled, but Donovan is confident the list will go over the 100 mark, if not reach 125.

It is reported that Harvard is not going to have a representative eleven this Fall. From New York comes word that Princeton will play Yale the rest of sports big drive for the war charities, November 11-17, if the Crimson does not care to battle her old foe.

KAHANAMOKU TO ENTER PELHAM BAY STATION

New York, Oct. 21.—Duke Kahanamoku of Honolulu, world's champion sprint swimmer, and his fellow aide from Hawaii—Harold Kruger and Clarence Lane—have been stationed at the Pelham Bay Naval Training Station.

Kruger and Lane arrived here a couple of days ago and reported for their official appointment. Duke is in Washington recovering from a slight attack of Spanish influenza. He will join his mates here as soon as his condition permits.

JIM COFFROTH COMING TO HELP SPORT DRIVE

New York, Oct. 21.—Jim Coffroth, California boxing promoter, was due to arrive here today to begin a rounding up of Eastern boxers to aid the drive of the United War Work Council. Part of the program is a great boxing tournament at Madison Square Garden. Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey are expected to appear, although it is not likely they will hook up. Each will probably go a few rounds with some well known heavyweight.

Several Eastern clubs have offered to hold benefits to help the drive.

CRACK JUVENILES HOOK UP AT LAUREL THURSDAY

Baltimore, Oct. 21—The great $10,000-a-side race between Billy Kelly and Arrival, kings of the season's two-year-olds, is set for Laurel Thursday. It will be a Liberty Bond-a-length race exclusively, as each car Commodore J. K. L. Ross of Montreal, or Jim McClelland of Kentucky, will not start unless the purse goes out of the event. The $10,000 in bonds forming the prize hung up by the Maryland State Fair Corporation, as well as the losing owner's $10,000 side bet, will be given to the Red Cross.

TRIS SPEAKER DUE TO START AT TECH TODAY

Tris Speaker, famous ex-Red Sox outfielder and one of Boston's greatest baseball idols, was ticketed to enter Tech's Naval Aviation School today. The Texan reached the city late last week. He's overly enthusiastic over his new duties and claims he will become a pilot in quick time.

BUSY WEEK FOR BOXING FANS; FOUR SHOWS

By RINGSIDE.

The boxing game, which has been on the shelf for the past few weeks, gets going again in full blast this week and the fans who like to watch the boys "smash" one another (as Able the Agent would say) are in their glory.

They have four cards to draw to, as follows: Tomorrow night, the Arena, Thursday night, Lowell; Friday night, the Commercial A. C. and Marlboro Driving Club.

The Armory A. A. has this menu underlined for tomorrow night: Battling Clair of New York vs. Shaver O'Brien of South Boston, ten rounds; Walter Laurette of New York vs. Walter Butler of Revere, ten rounds; Bob Josephs of the South End vs. Charley Mitchell of Braintree, ten rounds, and Chick Suggs of Newport, R. I., vs. Kid Francis of Lawrence, eight rounds. It's a real gaudy bill, but should be replete with action.

Sam Langford and Battling Jim Lowe, two flinky heavyweights, will pull off their much postponed bout at the Crescent A. C., Lowell, while the little fellows, Joe Currie of New Haven, Ct., and Battling Lahn of New York, will entertain in the feature number at the Comercial A. C.

Mike Paulson and Young Goula will meet again each other's good looks in the semi-final number.

Dave Powers, Malden blond, and Young Joe of Chelsea will show the Marlboro fans what the word action means. Dave and the youngster are slated to go ten rounds.

COUNTRY'S BEST FLIERS FOR BELMONT MEET

New York, Oct. 21.—Army fliers from every field in the North will be seen at the big air meet to be conducted by the First Provisional Wing of the Air Service at Belmont Park Saturday. More than 100 planes will take part in the big program, which includes bomb-throwing competition and exhibitions of every maneuvre used by the fighting fliers.

Lieutenant Colonel Claude K. Rhinehart, in command of the seven fields on Long Island, promises the most sensational show yet seen in this country. In addition to the flying events there will be land competitions among the enlisted men under the direction of Captain Barton. The proceeds will go for athletic goods and Winter necessities for the men.

NAVY BOXERS TO SHOW IN TOURNEY IN LONDON

Newport, R. I., Oct. 21.—The best boxers from "Fly" to heavyweights in the United States will take part in the battle for the King's trophy in London, December 11 and 12, according to announcement made here. Rear Admiral Sims, commander of the United States naval forces in European waters, has asked the navy to send over its best men, and general instructions governing the men who are to compete will be issued shortly.

The tournament will be open to all men in the United States navies. The French and English have already signified their intention of being represented.

PELHAM BOYS TO HAVE BUSY WINTER CAMPAIGN

A schedule of events, which will be continued until December, is being arranged by Willis Gordon, track captain at the Pelham Bay Naval Training station. The cross country team has been organized and it is safe to say it will be just about the best in the country.

GREEN-PENN MAY CLASH ON THANKSGIVING DAY

Graduate Athletic Director H. G. Ponder of Dartmouth wants Boston College to visit Hanover for a game with the Big Green next Saturday. Ponder has hopes of Dartmouth playing Penn State at Shibe Field, Philadelphia, Thanksgiving Day.

N. Y. A. C. Boxing Tournament

New York, Oct. 21.—Athletic activities will be continued at the New York A. C. Thursday and Saturday night with a big amateur boxing tournament. Four classes will be contested, as follows: 110, 120, 130 and 145 pounds.

Yeo, Bo, German 'Sub' Skipper, Knew Black When He Saw Him

Newport, R. I., Oct. 21.—Although the galaxy of former collegiate football stars, whose twinkled last Fall in the uniforms of the Naval Aviation District eleven has ceased to shine, there is now double the quantity and quality of gridiron material enrolled at the local station.

Cupid Black, Eddie Mahan, Casey Bigelow, Harry Vickery, Hitie, Gerrish and Paisley.

Black now is a member of the crew of the Abraham Lincoln, which was attacked by a submarine recently. A commander is authority for the statement that when Black asked the captain of the German submarine permission to leave the raft, to which the crew had been transferred, and go on the Lincoln, the captain responded in faultless English:

"Certainly, 'Cupid' Black, you may go."

"How did you know my name?" queried Black.

"I saw you play football in New Haven three years ago," replied the captain of the German sub.

Black is only one of Newport's stars of last season who are now fighting German "subs," but their places have been more than filled by splendid athletes from practically every big American university.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN OCTOBER 21, 1918. BOSTON.

How the People Could Veto an Unjust Measure

Second Lesson in the Working of the Proposed Initiative and Referendum Amendment

In a previous article the AMERICAN showed how, if the Initiative and Referendum amendment recommended by the Constitutional Convention is ratified by the voters at the State election, THE PEOPLE OF MASSACHUSETTS COULD THEMSELVES ENACT a measure which the majority of the voters desired, but which A MISREPRESENTATIVE LEGISLATURE HAD PERSISTENTLY REFUSED to enact. We will now trace the steps that would have to be taken to enable the majority of the voters TO VETO AN UNJUST MEASURE THAT THE LEGISLATURE HAS SEEN FIT TO ENACT.

It must be remembered that under the Convention's carefully-guarded plan NOT ALL ACTS of the Legislature are subject to an appeal to the people by means of the Referendum. In the first place, THE LEGISLATURE WILL RETAIN ITS EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION, subject, of course, to the limitations of the Constitution, over ALL MEASURES RELATING TO RELIGION OR RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS, TO THE JUDGES OR THE COURTS, to particular cities or parts of the State, or to appropriations for the current or ordinary expenses of any State department or institution. Bills on any of these subjects cannot be referred to the voters for ratification or rejection except by vote of the Legislature itself.

Still another class of measures, called EMERGENCY bills, CANNOT BE PREVENTED FROM TAKING EFFECT by an appeal to the Referendum, though they MAY BE REPEALED a year or more afterward by using the Initiative and Referendum to submit to the voters a repealing bill in the manner described in the preceding article. The Governor by proclamation, or the Legislature by a two-thirds vote of both branches, MAY MAKE ANY LAW AN EMERGENCY MEASURE by declaring that it "is necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, safety or convenience," and by putting on record the facts on which the emergency claim relies. The Convention rightly decided that it should not be possible for any group of objectors, however large, to suspend the operation of such measures until the will of the voters could be ascertained at the State election. With equal foresight, based on past experience of the wiles of corporation lawyers, it provided, however, that NO GRANT OR AMENDMENT OF A CORPORATION FRANCHISE, AND NO RENEWAL OR EXTENSION OF A CHARTER FOR MORE THAN A SINGLE YEAR, CAN BE DECLARED TO BE AN EMERGENCY MEASURE.

In order to give time to invoke the Referendum for annulling any measure to which the Referendum is permitted to apply, such measures are not to take effect until NINETY DAYS AFTER ENACTMENT, instead of either upon enactment or thirty days thereafter as is now the case. The steps required to lay the law before the voters for ratification or repeal are nearly the same as those required to INITIATE a measure.

1. WITHIN THIRTY DAYS after the law is enacted, ten qualified voters may file with the Secretary of the Commonwealth a petition asking that the law be referred to the people, and that it be suspended until the result of the vote is known. The Secretary, as before, will provide blank petitions headed by a description of the law as it will appear on the ballot, with the names and residences of the ten signers.

2. Within NINETY days after the law is enacted, the remonstrants must obtain the signatures of 15,000 QUALIFIED VOTERS and return the petitions to the Secretary. If they succeed in so doing the law will remain suspended and the question will go upon the ballot, not, however, in the form "Shall such or such a law enacted by the Legislature be REJECTED?" but "Shall it be RATIFIED?" so that IN EVERY CASE A "YES" VOTE WILL BE FOR A MEASURE AND A "NO" VOTE AGAINST IT.

3. If a majority of the voters equal to not less than 30 per cent. of the total number of ballots cast at the election vote "no" the measure is repealed and annulled. If a majority of those voting on the question vote "yes," OR IF THE "NO" MAJORITY IS LESS THAN THE REQUIRED 30 PER CENT., the law stands as enacted by the Legislature.

In this case, as in the case of a measure initiated by petition and turned down by the Legislature, the Secretary is required to furnish every voter with the full text of the bill, together with the action of the Legislature upon it and the reasons for its action, whether the arguments for and against the bill are supplied by majority and minority reports of a legislative committee or obtained from some other source.

Here again THE CONVENTION HAS TAKEN AMPLE PRECAUTIONS TO GUARD AGAINST THE HASTY AND ILL-CONSIDERED REJECTION BY THE VOTERS OF A LAW ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE. It is incredible that any law really desired by a majority of the voters and enacted by the Legislature would be annulled under such conditions. BUT THE SECURING OF UNFAIR SPECIAL PRIVILEGES by corporations will certainly be made more difficult than at present. NO WONDER THAT THE GREAT CORPORATIONS OBJECT TO SUCH A CURB ON THE POWER OF THE CORPORATION LOBBY, AND THAT THE MEN WHO CONTROL THE GREAT CORPORATIONS SHOULD NOW BE SPENDING THEIR MONEY FREELY TO FOOL THE VOTERS INTO REFUSING TO FOLLOW THE ADVICE OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION AND RATIFY THE INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM AMENDMENT.

Getting It Good

By T. E. Powers

Discourage Fear

Copyright, 1918, Star Company.

The world has its troubles that cannot be avoided. But fear is not one. Banish it. Fight and solve your problems WITHOUT FEAR.

Fight influenza, which is not half as serious as our fears make it out to be. Follow the advice of the Health Department, keep your hands clean, take precautions, and keep FREE FROM FEAR.

Go about your business, live normally. Avoid shaking hands with people you don't know well, but remember that a microbe cannot jump six feet nor two feet nor one foot.

A person may have the influenza and you cannot get it unless that person sneezes or coughs in your face. You can avoid that.

Fear depresses the heart, and doing so lays you open to the very thing that you fear. You know the story of the man who was always afraid of getting malaria. He kept away from crowds, waited outside the store until somebody had finished buying. While he was waiting a mosquito bit him and gave him the malaria that he was afraid of.

Go about your work in the usual way, keep cheerful, keep your brain normal, remember that the microbe of fear is considerably worse than the Spanish influenza microbe.

The world has business to do, every man has work that needs attention. Let him attend to that, and the influenza, in the hands of physicians and the competent Health Board, will attend to itself.

Hymn of Retribution

By Katherine Brooks

BLAZON your wrath, O nations of the earth!
Write it in tongues of flame across the sky;
Set in your archives how the foe make mirth
When maids are raped and little children die,
And wounded, groping men amid bombarded shelters lie—
Blazon their agony of blood and sweat,
Lest ye forget!

Picture (when craven heart in futile guise
Of piety your holy wrath would chide)
The torture of beloved flesh—the eyes
Of innocence debauched—the crimson tide
Staining the sea where nursing babes and tender mothers died;
Picture the butcher's hand that flung them there,
Lest ye forbear!

The hour has struck—remember! Now for truce
The common executioner shall whine,
And, spent with lust and slaughter and abuse,
Lift reeking, impious hands to the Divine—
O world, be thou implacable! In this great hour and sign,
Remember! Belgium in thy heart shall live,
Lest thou forgive!

TODAY

"He Thinks I'm Dead."
A Moving Picture Army.
Sending Smiles to France.
"His Father Never Saw Him."

By Arthur Brisbane

American soldiers in France will soon see the faces of their families at home—thanks to the moving picture.

At Grant Park, on the Chicago lake front yesterday, a hundred thousand men, women and children gathered. All day long, from early morning until darkness fell, they passed, eight abreast, smiling, waving their arms, carrying signs of identification, before the moving picture machines.

Relatives of men in the different regiments marched by, families of each particular regiment marching in separate groups.

Soon to each regiment will be shown moving pictures of the relatives at home. It is not necessary to say what happiness it will give the young fighters in France to see the smiling faces of their mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters and of their children in the mother's arms.

You knew what war means when you saw the lake front black with people, a thousand soldiers under Colonel Stuart Keeping order, a band of sailors from the Great Lakes playing inspiring music, and tens upon tens of thousands, very old men and women, and little children in arms marching before the moving pictures man that their pictures, smiling and happy, might be sent to comfort their boys fighting in France.

You know what women suffer when they give to war the child that they have borne and nursed through infancy.

You would have known yesterday if you could have seen and talked to a woman paralyzed, helpless, waiting to be carried before the camera that her son in France, who believes her dead, might know that she still lives.

She is Mrs. John House of No. 2452 Normandy avenue, in Chicago. Her mother, Mrs. L. A. McCashin of No. 396 Metropolitan place, sat beside her and told her daughter's story.

As the grandmother told the story the mother sat waiting to have her picture taken, holding in her trembling hands a sign on which was written in big letters, that the camera might show it, "Here I am, John."

Said the soldier's grandmother, "My daughter had a stroke when her son went away, and ever since she has been as you see her now, unable to walk, and crying about her boy. Her hands are paralyzed, she cannot write. Her son had to sail and couldn't go back to her. He thinks she is dead and that we are trying to deceive him. She has come to have her photograph taken and they are going to send a special moving picture of her direct to her son to make him know that she is alive.

"He is a good boy. His great-great-grandfather fought under Washington, his great-grandfather, who was my father, fought under Jackson in the battle of New Orleans."

As the grandmother talked the mother listened. "Yes," said she, "my boy thinks I'm dead, and I cannot write to him because I am paralyzed. I hope they will get me in front of the camera in some way so he won't see that I am not able to walk. It would make him feel so badly."

Then she burst into tears, and you would have done the same could you have seen that pitiful face.

As she talked thousands marched before the camera. A captain of police in full uniform led a little child three years old, carrying the sign, "Hello, Ben, your sister, Rita."

Behind her came a gray-haired woman who carried this sign, "Hello, my darling; all well home."

Then a boy of fifteen with this, "Get 'em, Herman."

And then a young woman carrying an infant a few weeks old and trying to make the poor little nodding head look at the camera. "His father has never seen him," said the mother. "I pray God that he may come back safe."

Hour after hour all day long the procession passed, faces of old grandmothers, children recently born, brothers and sisters and wives, printed with the speed of light to take happiness and a view of home to thousands of young men in the army.

That moving picture of tens of thousands is one of a series taken by William Randolph Hearst's newspaper, the Chicago Herald and Examiner. On Saturday Mr. Hearst announced a subscription of One Million Dollars to the Fourth Liberty Loan for himself and his publications. But that picture when it reaches France, showing to the soldiers the faces for which they are fighting, will do more to win this war than many millions.

Men fight with their hearts, and their affections. And in the smiles and greetings from home, the soldiers will find a fighting force that may not be resisted.

Give Thanks for Aid in Fighting Epidemic

To the Editor, Boston AMERICAN:

The publicity given the reports of the committees which made a preliminary investigation of our work, and the necessity of publicly acknowledging our indebtedness to many agencies which have made possible the carrying through of our effort, are responsible for the present communication.

The epidemic of influenza which is now sweeping the country had its beginning here in Boston. It came to us from Europe with many confusing and contradictory reports as to the agent accountable for its causation. To Lieutenant Keegan of the Naval Medical Corps we owe the demonstration that the influenza bacillus was the important causative factor, an association of this organism with various other bacteria being the practically constant finding in the fatal cases of pneumonia, although cultures from the nose and throat were usually negative. Lieutenant Keegan and Professor Rosenau demonstrated that no filterable virus was present in the group of cases which they examined. Dr. Keegan was also able to show that the process was a local infection, limited to the respiratory tract in most cases. Cultures from the blood during life or after death were constantly negative.

When the epidemic began here, we were given opportunity through the courtesy of Drs. Pollock and Clement of the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital to make cultures from the noses and throats of early cases. With several types of the pneumococcus we made a vaccine which was used in our first efforts to produce protection. Then came a report of Keegan's practically constant finding of an influenza bacillus in cases examined post-mortem.

We obtained a culture of the influenza bacillus from the nose of a nurse at the Carney Hospital, and on the same day procured a culture from Lieutenant Keegan at the Chelsea Naval Hospital. These strains, known as "Carney" and "Navy," were used in making our vaccine, until later, when a culture from Major Spooner of Camp Devens was added through the kindness of Dr. Allen.

The senior signer of this communication had, during several years, frequently proven in infections with the influenza bacillus in his own person and in others, that a vaccine made from cultures of the influenza bacillus would abort the infection if used early in large doses. If it were possible to abort a process already established in an infected individual, it should be possible to confer protection on a healthy individual, not yet attacked.

The war demands had left us with a minimal supply of doctors and nurses to care for the sick. When these began to collapse in large numbers at their work, prompt action was necessary if the mistrust of the profession in its own powers, and the undermining of public morale were to be overcome.

An influenza vaccine was prepared by us, offered first on ourselves, our families and our students, and then submitted to the profession. It was prepared by growth of the organisms on human blood agar, and was necessarily produced in small quantities. Its use was, therefore, limited to doctors and nurses, who were most highly exposed to the disease.

The results of this early work justified a belief that influenza vaccine was an efficient addition to our means of combating the disease. By this time it was evident that the plague in its spread was taking on the nature of a national calamity. The stories which came from Gloucester, for instance, are worthy of the pages of Defoe's "History of the Plague Year in London." If Camp Devens, handling Northern men, naturally resistant to respiratory infections, with the cleanest record among National Army Camps with reference to respiratory diseases during last Winter, suffered as it did, what would happen when the disease invaded the Southern camps?

If vaccine had value in controlling influenza, and the lesson of its value were to be spread rapidly, it was apparent that affiliation with constituted health authorities should be established. Through the courtesy of Commissioner Eugene R. Kelly, the Massachusetts State Department of Health undertook the investigation of the value of vaccine in the present epidemic, and supplied the funds to increase production. The work has proceeded since that time on this basis. Much of the testing has been carried out at the Antitoxin and Wasserman Laboratories of the State Department of Health, the Department of Hygiene and the Harvard Medical School, and the Biological Department at Technology. The preparation of culture media, the obtaining and addition of human blood, the collection, preservation, and bottling of the vaccine have been done wholly at the Tufts College Medical School.

It should be made plain that no person has at any time been permitted to pay for vaccine; that the expense of its production in the early days was borne wholly by the funds of the Department of Pathology at Tufts; that since the affiliation with the Massachusetts State Department of Health no person connected with the Tufts College Medical School, other than the engineer, janitor and washwomen, has received any compensation from State funds, and these have been paid only for overtime.

Volunteers have arisen, notably from the teaching staff at Simmons College, and our own teaching staff and students, who have accepted the opportunity for service and have sacrificed their own interests and their sleep in their willingness to help.

This is not the time or place to discuss the outcome of their work. The exact value of vaccine prophylaxis and therapy in influenza will be determined by scientific inquiry, but no person cognizant of the facts can doubt that vaccine is a valuable addition to our armamentarium. Recognition of this fact is suggested by the various public health services which have taken up its manufacture.

Four progressive measures have come out of the handling of the present epidemic, so far:

1—The use of masks.

2—The treatment of pneumonia in the open air, whose value has been thoroughly demonstrated by Surgeon-General Brooks.

2—The use of blood serum, from convalescent patients, in the treatment of pneumonia, as developed by Lieutenant Reddin at the Chelsea Naval Hospital.

4—The use of vaccine.

Massachusetts may fairly lay claim to pioneer efforts in connection with each of these measures.

Demonstration of the methods of producing vaccine have been made and cultures supplied to representatives of the State Boards of Health from several States, including Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island, and to the Health Department of cities, including Chicago, Montreal, Portland and Providence. We have furnished in addition descriptions of the method used, together with cultures to army camps and clinics as far West as Salt Lake City. Vaccine has been supplied to munition workers and agents of the Federal Shipping Board in several States, and to several cities in the United States and the Eastern Provinces, under the approval of the State Board of Health. Representatives of the profession from all of the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan and North Carolina, and from Canadian cities, including St. John, Halifax and Toronto, have been supplied with vaccine, as it could be spared, for their protection.

We desire to acknowledge our indebtedness:

To Lieutenant Keegan for a strain of the influenza bacillus from a fatal case.

To the Executive Staff of the Boston City Hospital, notably Drs. Wilson, Foley and Binnary, and to Drs. Place and Monahan of the South Department for assistance in the early demonstration of the prophylactic and therapeutic value of vaccine.

To the Staff of St. Elizabeth's Hospital for similar courtesy.

To Commissioner Kelly and Drs. Rosenau, Hinton and Allen of the Massachusetts State Department of Health for assistance and suggestions.

To Dr. George W. McCoy—director of the Hygienic Laboratory—U. S. Public Health Service, for constructive criticism and helpful suggestions.

To Major Spooner, through Dr. Allen, for a strain of the influenza bacillus from a fatal case at Camp Devens.

Through Superintendent Crowley, and Commissioner Grady, to the officers and men of combating the Boston Police and Fire Departments, and to other volunteers who supplied human blood and cultural needs, when our student supply was temporarily exhausted.

To the members of the West End Club who have given up their evenings to assisting us in the bottling and labelling of vaccine.

Finally, to the group of workers, students and others, who have so splendidly sustained our efforts, whose names are recorded on a roll of honor at the Laboratory.

Independently of the good which may have been accomplished, it has been a privilege to have been associated with a piece of work which has brought out the splendid qualities of devotion and self-sacrifice which human nature can exhibit in times of national danger.

With the waning of the epidemic in Massachusetts, the Laboratory closes its connection with the public production of vaccine, poorer in a material way, but rich in the commendation of members of the profession and others, and richer in the belief that its efforts and example have helped to mitigate the effects of the present plague.
